Rubber Workers Strike Nationwide

CLEVELAND (AP) — United Rubber Workers struck the rubber industry's Big Four companies Wednesday after failing to reach agreement on a contract before contracts expired at 12:01 a.m.

URW President Peter Bommarito said negotiations continued after the deadline following a last minute offer by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. But Bommarito said he held little hope for agreement.

The main stumbling block was economic issues that included a demand for an unlimited cost-of-living adjustment clause.

URW officials said 47 plants involving 60,000 URW members were ordered to shut down nationwide.

Bommarito had said the URW would extend its contract past the midnight deadline if the union and Firestone were close to agreement. But early Tuesday evening, he said, "We are not at that position."

Pickets already were in place at Firestone's Akron plant before midnight, a Firestone spokesman said.

Bommarito's announcement followed by about an hour a private discussion between Bommarito and Scearce, head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. There was no word as to the content of their discussion.

Bommarito also said that if he called a strike, it would be against all of the rubber industry's Big Four — Firestone, Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., B F. Goodrich Co. and Uniroyal Inc. Firestone previously was chosen for concentrated efforts which Bommarito said would include a worldwide boycott with AFL-CIO support if necessary.

Bommarito also made public a letter from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to the Justice Department's antitrust division chief, Thomas Kauper, asking about possible antitrust violations or investigations relative to a mutual aid agreement among the companies.

Company spokesmen acknowledged that such agreements have existed since 1967, indicating the agreements were revised to fit the circumstances of the negotiations each three years but refusing to give details of past or current pacts.

The URW went into the talks demanding an unlimited cost-of-living adjustment provision and an increase in hourly wages sufficient to bring the $5.50 URW hourly average into line with United Auto Workers pay and to keep it there. The amount needed was estimated at $1.65 in the first year and $2 or more over life of the contract.

Company concern centered on separating tire and nontire worker pay scales, a step the URW insisted it wouldn't accept, and on work rule and other operational and pay changes aimed at making nontire operations more competitive with those in smaller, nonunion companies.

The Big Four's last known offer proposed $1.05 in hourly wage increases for tire workers over the life of the contract, 50 cents of it in the first year; 85 cents for nontire workers over three years; and a cost-of-living adjustment ranging from 5 to 10 cents an hour per year.

The union said at the outset it wanted an increase of $2 an hour for skilled tradesmen such as electrical or machinists, plus improvements in pensions, supplemental unemployment benefits and other fringes in a total package of increases Bommarito estimated at 42 per cent.

A URW spokesman said the current fringe package added $3.55 to the hourly wage for a total of $9.05.

The URW pointed out that its 1973 contracts were negotiated while the economic controls of Phase III were in effect but that the UAW contract was reached after Phase III's removal. The effect was to limit the URW wage boost to 6 per cent without the cost-of-living adjustment which the UAW was able to obtain, the URW said.

The UAW's cost-of-living provision added $1.05 to its members' wages that currently average $6.76 an hour but range from $6.56 to a high of $8.11 for skilled workers plus a fringe package adding $3 to the hourly average. The URW wants to catch up, contending that its pay has climbed only 17 per cent while inflation has boosted the cost of living 27 per cent.

URW sources said the dollar value of the total package couldn't be estimated because of such variables as insurance rate increases.

Union spokesmen said the allegations of company assistance pacts were presented to Kennedy 10 days ago when he attended a labor session in Washington. Officials said he received a copy of the letter Tuesday.

In it, Kennedy told Kauper that he understood the pact took such forms of assistance as permitting a struck company to use the retail outlets of a major tire competitor.

He asked Kauper to say whether the allegations were true, whether the department had considered any antitrust investigation or other action related to antitrust prosecution, and whether it has discovered "other anticompetitive practices in the industry."

Bommarito said earlier the agreement provides for such help as transfer of a struck company's tire molds to other companies which then go ahead with production for the one that was shut down.

Industry sources said previous practices have included provision for some form of financial assistance if needed and for exchange of products.

Bommarito cited the aid agreement as the reason it would be necessary to strike all four if any were struck. He also previously has cited URW plans for international labor assistance as necessary to combat the companies' multinational strength.

He said that shutting down all four would cut off 88 per cent of the nation's tire production.

Auto companies have said they anticipate little immediate effect in event of a strike because they have stockpiled tires but that a lengthy strike could cut into car production. They say the Big Four supplies about 65 per cent of the industry's tires.

The diversity in the rubber and plastics field, with about 1,500 companies making a total of about 32,000 products, was expected to offset immediate effects outside the Big Four

Local Plant Struck, Picket Lines Set Up

The roar of the crowd at the main gate of the Lincoln Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. plant at 56th and Seward muffled the shift-change whistle which ended the work period for about 450 employes Tuesday night and marked the start of the first strike at the plant since 1970.

World of the strike came from Don Wright, United Rubber Workers Local 286 vice president, as the third shift assembled at the gate shortly before 11 p.m. He said some 1600 union workers are employed at the plant.

The union has planned round-the-clock picketing at the main plant and a branch plant in the Air Park West industrial complex, Wright added.

A beer-drinking, firecracker-shooting crowd lined the street across from the plant and watched about a dozen pickets for nearly an hour after the strike announcement became official.

The strike had been rumored for days.

Local union officials met with Lincoln police Monday to discuss picketing plans. Meanwhile, Paul Ess, Goodyear personnel manager, and Gilbert Laws, Local 286 president, attended negotiations in Cincinnati.

Both sides agreed to a news blackout shortly after negotiations began March 8.

The strike idles some 2,000 workers at the Lincoln plant.

A month-long strike would mean wage losses of about $1.7 million, according to 1975 payroll figures. Lincoln Goodyear employes averaged more than $10,700 a year in 1975.

Goodyear, Lincoln's largest private employer, paid $20 million in employe earnings last year. In addition, it purchased $10.5 million worth of goods and services from 370 firms within a 50-mile radius of Lincoln.

The company paid $410,000 in local taxes.

The Lincoln plant produces power transmission belts, radiator hoses and tracks for snowmobiles.

Observers say the strike could be a long one. The 1970 strike lasted eight weeks. A 1967 strike idled Lincoln Goodyear workers for 13 days.

Punches Aren't Pulled By Former CIA Agent

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON
Star Staff Writer

Former CIA agent Victor Marchetti didn't pull any punches Tuesday night when he addressed a small group of students at a University of Nebraska-Lincoln residence hall.

Marchetti, who resigned from the Central Intelligence Agency in 1969 after serving 14 years with the agency, said he quit, in part, because he thought the CIA had become a "half-assed Gestapo."

"I had married the agency in the sense that people become Jesuits . . . and it was very hard for me to break with it," he said of his association with the CIA.

"When I walked away, I had no intention of blowing the whistle on the agency," said Marchetti, whose "The CIA and the Cult of Intelligence" was the first book the U.S. government attempted to censor prior to publication.

The book, which was published in 1974, prompted a legal battle between Marchetti and the CIA in which 168 passages were deleted from the original manuscript.

In a speech Tuesday afternoon, sponsored by the Nebraska Union Programs Talks and Topics Committee, Marchetti covered much of the same information he had included in the controversial book.

Calling the CIA "a secret fraternity of the American political aristocracy," Marchetti said U.S. presidents use the CIA without the knowledge or consent of Congress or the American people.

The agency costs American taxpayers between $6 and $8 billion per year, he claimed, "and you have virtually no say over what's going on because you don't know what's going on."

Marchetti had little good to say about recent investigations of the agency.

He called the Rockefeller Commission probe "whitewash." And he said the Church Committee report accomplished little of "lasting value.

Ford's recent reorganization of the agency amounted to little more than changing a few names and adding a few people to an ineffective committee, Marchetti said.

Reiterating a theme he pursued in his book, Marchetti said agencies like the CIA have a legitimate function — the gathering of information to be used by Congress, policy makers and the American people

"But we do not need clandestine agencies" which involve the U.S. in assassination attempts and "debacles like the Bay of Pigs," he said

Reciting a whole list of CIA "dirty tricks," Marchetti said the agency has "consorted with such types as Mafia gangsters and . Howard Hughes."

He criticized the laxity of congressional CIA oversight, and he said that "every president since Truman has lied about his use or misuse of the CIA."

The CIA's involvement in domestic affairs is "scary," said Marchetti.

Historically, he said, secret agencies have ultimately been designed to keep the local populace under control. And he added, "I feel this country is drifting towards fascism."

Nelson Named Principal Of Lincoln High School

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Sanford H. (Sam) Nelson was appointed Lincoln High School principal Tuesday.

Nelson, 43, is president of the Lincoln School of Commerce. To succeed retiring William B. Bogar, Nelson will return to the halls where he won his high school diploma in 1951.

The Lincoln Board of Education unanimously approved Nelson for the post. He'll be paid between $25,000 and $26,500 annually, depending on final terms of the negotiated settlement for 1976-77 contracts still pending.

The board also named Thomas C. Fortune, 31, of Bellevue, district superviser of speech and language therapy.

As he prepared to take the helm of the 1,405-student school, Nelson said, "I am greatly pleased to be associated again with the Lincoln Public Schools and the program at Lincoln High." He cited its "long, great academic and athletic tradition" and "outstanding" faculty and students.

No Major Changes

Announcing no major changes, Nelson said he'll "continue programs in existence and build upon them." He'll inherit completion of the $2 million Lincoln High remodeling project.

The board restored his seniority and benefits levels, since Nelson had served the public school district 17 years before taking over last year as Lincoln School of Commerce head.

Just prior to that, he was federal programs director for the district. Earlier, he was an elementary school principal for seven years in Lincoln, and also served as teacher and assistant principal.

NWU Graduate

Nelson earned his bachelors degree at Nebraska Wesleyan University (1955), and his masters at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln (1964). He has done additional graduate work at UNL and taught educational administration courses there.

Recently promoted to captain in the U.S. Naval Reserve, Nelson has been active in community affairs. He serves on governing boards of Lincoln-Lancaster Civil Defense Commission, Youth Services System, Boy Scout district, Malone Community Center and YMCA.

Nelson also is a volunteer juvenile court probation officer, superintendent of a church school and member of the Red Cross water safety committee, United Way planning committee and advisory board of Language Enhancement Program of Mexican-American Children.

Nelson and his wife Norma, of 7525 S. Hampton Rd., have two children, Steven, 16, and Scott, 12. A Phi Delta Kappa professional education society member, Nelson is affiliated with numerous professional, military, fraternal and civic organizations.

2 UNL Degrees

Fortune, the new speech and language therapy superviser, now oversees special services in the Bellevue Public Schools. A Rushville native, he holds two UNL degrees, including a masters in speech pathology and hearing.

To succeed retiring Norma H. Plumb, Fortune has served in the Bellevue schools since 1972. From 1967-72, he was a speech and hearing clinician with Educational Service Unit 12 at Alliance. He has also taught English as a second language to migrant Mexican-American children.

Fortune is a member of numerous special education and professional associations. He and his wife Mary Ellen have two children, Eric, 6, and Sean, 8.

Feel edgy?

An American soldier in Germany, a young German woman in Spain and a drunken Soviet tractor driver acted out their fantasies.

In Ansbach, West Germany, residents of an apartment building were awakened before dawn last Thursday to find a big U.S. Army cannon aimed straight at their building. The landlady and 19 residents thought it wise to flee and promptly did so.

Not a shot was fired, however, from the 175mm howitzer. A newspaper later reported the gun wasn't loaded.

A U.S. Army spokesman said Tuesday that Spec. 4 Jonathon Robinson requisitioned the self-propelled weapon from a guarded motor pool after an argument with the landlady, smashed it through barriers at the post and tore up streets and a park en route to the apartment building.

Military Police caught up with the soldier by the time he reached the building, where he lived, and took him into custody, the spokesman said.

Robinson, 24, from Memphis, Tenn., was charged with misappropriating a government vehicle, driving while intoxicated and destroying government and civilian property worth $2,500. The Army said he was normally assigned as a gunner on the tracked weapon.

The military spokesman gave no details of the argument with the landlady, but a German newspaper said the woman had confiscated Robinson's tape recorder and phonograph because he refused to pay $600 he allegedly owed her.

In the southern Spanish port city of Algeciras, Kiechofter Kamen, 20, dropped into the Moroccan consulate and asked for a visa to visit the country just across the Strait of Gibraltar.

The Spanish news agency Cifra said Tuesday the visa was denied and Miss Kamen then grabbed a portrait of Moroccan King Hassan II, threw it on the floor and trampled it.

A policeman was summoned and as Miss Kamen was being led away, according to Cifra, she began shedding her clothes in the street in heavy rain. She was finally driven to the police station in a jeep and released after questioning.

In the Soviet Union, a tipsy tractor driver first barged up to the vodka counter of a store in the city of Kirov on foot and demanded that he be sold another bottle.

The salesman told him to go home and sleep it off, reported the government newspaper Izvestia. He stormed out of the store, slamming the door behind him.

"Then a minute later the store shook all over," Izvestia said. "The man's tractor first sheared off the store's front steps, then took a corner off the building and finally became wedged in its door.

"This saved the terrified customers and the resolute salesman."

Nothing saved the unidentified tractor driver, however. He was sentenced Tuesday to four years in jail.

Nebraska, Wyoming Discuss Platte Flow

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Gov. J. James Exon and Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas met Tuesday in Cheyenne with Wyoming Gov. Ed Herschler to discuss a new power station there which may reduce water available to Nebraska irrigators, The Star has learned.

Specifically, they were concerned about the impact on the North Platte River of a planned 1.5 million kilowatt power station near Wheatland.

Exon and Douglas were accompanied by State Water Resources Director Marion Ball, Natural Resources Director Dayle Williamson and Public Works Committee Chairman Sen. Maurice Kremer of Aurora

Exon's office confirmed that a main topic of the meeting was the Laramie River Power Station, of which the Lincoln Electric System is a part owner

The Nebraska officials were not scheduled to return to Lincoln until late Tuesday and efforts to contact them in Cheyenne were unsuccessful

Norm Otto, an Exon aide, said, "This is not something that's going to be decided today. It's going to be discussed for some time."

Nebraska has a pact with Wyoming to assure a minimum flow of water in the North Platte River to meet the state's needs. The Laramie River, a tributary of the North Platte, would supply water needed by the power station for cooling the coal-fired plant's generators as well as by an irrigation project.

The U.S. Supreme Court has affirmed the pact under which Nebraska is entitled to 75% of the North Platte River flow while Wyoming gets 25%.

It has been estimated that the Laramie River Station's cooling towers would lead to the evaporation of 30,000 acre feet of water annually. In addition, the Corn Creek Irrigation Project proposed in conjunction with the plant would use another 16,000 acre feet annually

At issue is whether the 46,000 acre feet of water to be removed each year from the Laramie River (and ultimately the North Platte River) would violate the pact

Among those who have expressed concern about the development of coal-fired generation plants in Wyoming on water available to Nebraska irrigators is Don Long of the Central Nebraska Public Power and Irrigation District.

The project has been opposed by environmentalists and the Wyoming Game and Fish Department.

Rubber Workers Strike Nationwide

CLEVELAND (AP) — United Rubber Workers struck the rubber industry's Big Four companies Wednesday after failing to reach agreement on a contract before contracts expired at 12:01 a.m.

URW President Peter Bommarito said negotiations continued after the deadline following a last minute offer by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. But Bommarito said he held little hope for agreement.

The main stumbling block was economic issues that included a demand for an unlimited cost-of-living adjustment clause.

URW officials said 47 plants involving 60,000 URW members were ordered to shut down nationwide.

Bommarito had said the URW would extend its contract past the midnight deadline if the union and Firestone were close to agreement. But early Tuesday evening, he said, "We are not at that position."

Pickets already were in place at Firestone's Akron plant before midnight, a Firestone spokesman said.

Bommarito's announcement followed by about an hour a private discussion between Bommarito and Scearce, head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. There was no word as to the content of their discussion.

Bommarito also said that if he called a strike, it would be against all of the rubber industry's Big Four — Firestone, Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., B.F. Goodrich Co. and Uniroyal Inc. Firestone previously was chosen for concentrated efforts which Bommarito said would include a worldwide boycott with AFL-CIO support if necessary.

Bommarito also made public a letter from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to the Justice Department's antitrust division chief, Thomas Kauper, asking about possible antitrust violations or investigations relative to a mutual aid agreement among the companies.

Company spokesmen acknowledged that such agreements have existed since 1967, indicating the agreements were revised to fit the circumstances of the negotiations each three years but refusing to give details of past or current pacts.

The URW went into the talks demanding an unlimited cost-of-living adjustment provision and an increase in hourly wages sufficient to bring the $5.50 URW hourly average into line with United Auto Workers pay and to keep it there. The amount needed was estimated at $1.65 in the first year and $2 or more over life of the contract.

Company concern centered on separating tire and nontire worker pay scales, a step the URW insisted it wouldn't accept, and on work rule and other operational and pay changes aimed at making nontire operations more competitive with those in smaller, nonunion companies.

The Big Four's last known offer proposed $1.05 in hourly wage increases for tire workers over the life of the contract, 50 cents of it in the first year; 85 cents for nontire workers over three years; and a cost-of-living adjustment ranging from 5 to 10 cents an hour per year.

The union said at the outset it wanted an increase of $2 an hour for skilled tradesmen such as electrical or machinists, plus improvements in pensions, supplemental unemployment benefits and other fringes in a total package of increases Bommarito estimated at 42 per cent.

A URW spokesman said the current fringe package added $3.55 to the hourly wage for a total of $9.05.

The URW pointed out that its 1973 contracts were negotiated while the economic controls of Phase III were in effect but that the UAW contract was reached after Phase III's removal. The effect was to limit the URW wage boost to 6 per cent without the cost-of-living adjustment which the UAW was able to obtain, the URW said.

The UAW's cost-of-living provision added $1.05 to its members' wages that currently average $6.76 an hour but range from $6.56 to a high of $8.11 for skilled workers plus a fringe package adding $3 to the hourly average. The URW wants to catch up, contending that its pay has climbed only 17 per cent while inflation has boosted the cost of living 27 per cent.

URW sources said the dollar value of the total package couldn't be estimated because of such variables as insurance rate increases.

Union spokesmen said the allegations of company assistance pacts were presented to Kennedy 10 days ago when he attended a labor session in Washington. Officials said he received a copy of the letter Tuesday.

In it, Kennedy told Kauper that he understood the pact took such forms of assistance as permitting a struck company to use the retail outlets of a major tire competitor.

He asked Kauper to say whether the allegations were true, whether the department had considered any antitrust investigation or other action related to antitrust prosecution, and whether it has discovered "other anticompetitive practices in the industry."

Bommarito said earlier the agreement provides for such help as transfer of a struck company's tire molds to other companies which then go ahead with production for the one that was shut down.

Industry sources said previous practices have included provision for some form of financial assistance if needed and for exchange of products.

Bommarito cited the aid agreement as the reason it would be necessary to strike all four if any were struck. He also previously has cited URW plans for international labor assistance as necessary to combat the companies' multinational strength.

Auto companies have said they anticipate little immediate effect in event of a strike because they have stockpiled tires but that a lengthy strike could cut into car production. They say the Big Four supplies about 65 per cent of the industry's tires.

The diversity in the rubber and plastics field, with about 1,500 companies making a total of about 32,000 products, was expected to offset immediate effects outside the Big Four.

Military Police caught up with the soldier by the time he reached the building, where he lived, and took him into custody, the spokesman said.

Robinson, 24, from Memphis, Tenn., was charged with misappropriating a government vehicle, driving while intoxicated and destroying government and civilian property worth $2,500. The Army said he was normally assigned as a gunner on the tracked weapon.

The military spokesman gave no details of the argument with the landlady, but a German newspaper said the woman had confiscated Robinson's tape recorder and phonograph because he refused to pay $600 he allegedly owed her.

In the southern Spanish port city of Algeciras, Kiechofter Kamen, 20, dropped into the Moroccan consulate and asked for a visa to visit the country just across the Strait of Gibraltar.

The Spanish news agency Cifra said Tuesday the visa was denied and Miss Kamen then grabbed a portrait of Moroccan King Hassan II, threw it on the floor and trampled it.

A policeman was summoned and as Miss Kamen was being led away, according to Cifra, she began shedding her clothes in the street in heavy rain. She was finally driven to the police station in a jeep and released after questioning.

In the Soviet Union, a tipsy tractor driver first barged up to the vodka counter of a store in the city of Kirov on foot and demanded that he be sold another bottle.

The salesman told him to go home and sleep it off, reported the government newspaper Izvestia. He stormed out of the store, slamming the door behind him.

"Then a minute later the store shook all over," Izvestia said. "The man's tractor first sheared off the store's front steps, then took a corner off the building and finally became wedged in its door.

"This saved the terrified customers and the resolute salesman."

Nothing saved the unidentified tractor driver, however. He was sentenced Tuesday to four years in jail.

Nebraska, Wyoming Discuss Platte Flow

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Gov. J. James Exon and Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas met Tuesday in Cheyenne with Wyoming Gov. Ed Herschler to discuss a new power station there which may reduce water available to Nebraska irrigators, The Star has learned.

Specifically, they were concerned about the impact on the North Platte River of a planned 1.5 million kilowatt power station near Wheatland.

Exon and Douglas were accompanied by State Water Resources Director Marion Ball, Natural Resources Director Dayle Williamson and Public Works Committee Chairman Sen. Maurice Kremer of Aurora.

Exon's office confirmed that a main topic of the meeting was the Laramie River Power Station, of which the Lincoln Electric System is a part owner.

The Nebraska officials were not scheduled to return to Lincoln until late Tuesday, and efforts to contact them in Cheyenne were unsuccessful.

Norm Otto, an Exon aide, said, "This is not something that's going to be decided today. It's going to be discussed for some time."

Nebraska has a pact with Wyoming to assure a minimum flow of water in the North Platte River to meet the state's needs. The Laramie River, a tributary of the North Platte, would supply water needed by the power station for cooling the coal-fired plant's generators as well as by an irrigation project.

The U.S. Supreme Court has affirmed the pact under which Nebraska is entitled to 75% of the North Platte River flow while Wyoming gets 25%.

It has been estimated that the Laramie River Station's cooling towers would lead to the evaporation of 30,000 acre feet of water annually. In addition, the Corn Creek Irrigation Project proposed in conjunction with the plant would use another 16,000 acre feet annually.

At issue is whether the 46,000 acre feet of water to be removed each year from the Laramie River (and ultimately the North Platte River) would violate the pact.

Among those who have expressed concern about the development of coal-fired generation plants in Wyoming on water available to Nebraska irrigators is Don Long of the Central Nebraska Public Power and Irrigation District.

The project has been opposed by environmentalists and the Wyoming Game and Fish Department.

Giant Planet Went To Pieces

WASHINGTON (AP) — The orbits of 60 comets indicate they originated from the explosion of a giant planet that once existed between Mars and Jupiter, an astonomer says.

Dr. Thomas C. Van Flandern of the U.S. Naval Observatory here said in an interview Tuesday that computer plotting of the comet orbits seems to confirm that the long-theorized planet existed up to about six million years ago.

"At that time, the planet exploded — accounting for most, if not all comets, the asteroid belt and many meteorites," Van Flandern said.

What could have caused such an explosion is unknown.

The astronomer traced backward the orbits of 60 comets that have been seen only once from earth. These comets have orbits so large that it takes millions of years for one swing around the sun.

"There is a tendency for these orbits to intersect at a common starting point in the asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter," Van Flandern said. The asteroid belt is a ring of rocky bodies orbiting the sun.

Three quarters of the orbits indicate the comets originated in that area five million to seven million years ago in a zone about 100 million miles wide, he said.

The orbits don't intersect exactly at one spot, he said, because the comets probably were disturbed by the gravitational influences of the galaxy and passing stars.

Van Flandern said his findings, drawn from a year of calculations, are in line with a theory proposed in 1972 by M. W. Overden, an astronomer at the University of British Columbia.

Overden calculated that a giant planet 90 times the mass of earth once existed where the asteroid belt is now. Three quarters of this planet would have been made up of liquids and gases surrounding a solid core.

"The asteroids may be the broken-up core and the comets may be the atmosphere or liquid," Van Flandern said.

The bodies in the asteroid belt — ranging in size from the 500-mile-diameter Ceres to thousands of smaller fragments — contain only about one-thousandth the mass of earth. For so little to remain, Van Flandern said, the planet's explosion must have been so violent as to fling much of its material out of the solar system.

"If we broke up a large planet today, most of its material either would escape the solar system or be swept up by the large outer planets," he said. "Overton thinks most remnants of the missing planet were swept up by Jupiter and Saturn, the biggest planets."

Two centuries ago, German astronomer Johann Bode devised a formula for predicting the planets' distances from the sun. His formula predicted a planet between Mars and Jupiter, but none was found.

Debbie Said Give It Back And They Did

Osage, Iowa (UPI) — Charge of larceny were filed Tuesday against two Missouri residents who cleaned out a cash drawer full of money at a grocery store and then returned it to the grocer's daughter.

Being held in the Mitchell County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bond each following arraignment were Robert A. Belt, 33, and Patricia A. Lockette, 20, both of Kansas City, Mo.

A man and a woman Monday took between $800 and $1,000 from Steele's Super Valu, police said. Authorities said the woman bandit detained the store's only clerk while the man scooped the money out of an open cash register drawer.

Debbie Steele, 16, daughter of owner Everett Steele, said she saw the money was missing and ran after the couple, who were getting into a car bearing out-of-state license plates. Debbie told police she demanded that the two return the money, and they did.

"I feel relieved," said Debbie after the incident.

"She's got more guts than I do," said her father.

The two suspects were apprehended early Tuesday as they attempted to free their car, which had become stuck in a bluffs area along the Cedar River in nearby Mitchell, police said.

Yes, He Had A Few

Brisbane, Australia (AP) — Wilson James Smyth, a 47-year-old timber cutter, set what police called a record when he registered .40% blood alcohol on a breath analysis machine.

"I think I have a bit of a problem," he told Magistrate S. J. Deer in court at Gympie after being charged Tuesday with driving a car while under the influence of alcohol.

The magistrate fined him $350 and banned him from driving for 15 months.

Ford's Federal Refund Exceeds $11,631

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford paid a total of $94,569 in federal income taxes for 1975 and received a refund check recently for more than $11,631, his chief spokesman disclosed Tuesday.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen made public information on the income and taxes paid by the President and Mrs. Ford for 1975 and said:

"The President in doing this suggests all the candidates for president publish their records . . . in as much detail as he has, so the American people can have the information.

The data Nessen supplied listed the gross income of the Fords at $251,991.24 and federal income tax payments of $94,568.93.

When the federal taxes are added to state and local tax payments of $11,941.91, Nessen said, they accounted for 42% of the family's gross income — the same percentage as in 1974 when the Fords' gross income was some $104,000 lower because the President had earned a White House salary for only five months of the year.

After subtracting allowances for personal exemptions, itemizing deductions and claiming about $23,000 in tax-free business expenses, Nessen said, the Fords had a 1975 taxable income of $204,605.83. This figure was about $76,000 higher than the comparable one for a year earlier.

Nessen said the largest single item included in the $23,000 of business expenses was the cost of buying and mailing 35,000 Christmas cards.

The White House spokesman said about $106,000 in federal taxes were withheld from the President's weekly paychecks last year, which left him owed a refund of more than $11,000. Nessen said, however, that the Fords had to pay a small amount — perhaps no more than $200 — to cover Michigan income taxes that were not withheld.

The Fords deducted charitable contributions of $6,759.34 for 1975, up from $5,849 a year earlier.

Nessen said most of the contributions represented relatively small donations to a large number of organizations such as the Boy Scouts and the American Red Cross.

The Fords' 1975 state, local and other taxes of $11,942 was nearly double the 1974 level of $5,985. The White House spokesman said the President's higher income largely accounted for that.

Interest and other deductions declined last year to $1,087 from the 1974 total of $2,726, Nessen said. He reported that the President had paid off or reduced a number of outstanding loans during the year.

The President claimed $750 personal exemptions for himself and his wife and each of his four children, except son Steve. In 1974, Steve Ford was claimed as an exemption but Nessen said he was not eligible last year because he no longer was a full-time student.

Two Persons Treated After Gang Stones Cars

BOSTON (AP) — Several streets were closed and at least two white people were treated at a hospital Tuesday night after a gang of 100 black youths stoned cars in the city's racially mixed Mattapan section.

Carney Hospital said a woman suffered arm cuts from broken glass and a 15-year-old girl was cut in the head from the stonings Tuesday night.

Police said at least eight cars were stoned on Norfolk Street and some windshields were broken.

Police blocked off Blue Hill Avenue, a main route through Mattapan from predominantly black Roxbury, for about a mile.

Meanwhile, a white man was unconscious in poor condition at Boston City Hospital after he was dragged from his car and beaten by blacks Monday night.

A juvenile and a 19-year-old black man were arrested Tuesday on assault charges stemming from the Monday night beating.

Police said Randy Lewis, 19, of the Roxbury section was arrested Tuesday afternoon for assault with intent to murder and armed robbery. They said the assailants took the wallet of their victim, Richard Poleet, 34.

A 16-year-old black youth was accused in Juvenile Court of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, a brick, in the beating Monday night of Poleet. Police said at least four others were being sought.

Woman Killed By Tornado

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP) — A woman was killed when a tornado cut a 100-yard swath through two trailer parks Tuesday night.

A spokesman for the sheriff's office said the woman died when her trailer was blown into a pond. She was identified by the sheriff's office as Mrs. Glenn Randall.

Four persons had been reported missing, but a spokesman for Natchitoches' Civil Defense office said all were later accounted for.

A spokesman for Natchitoches Parish Hospital said 23 persons were being treated for various injuries.

Two Persons Treated After Gang Stones Cars

BOSTON (AP) — Several streets were closed and at least two white people were treated at a hospital Tuesday night after a gang of 100 black youths stoned cars in the city's racially mixed Mattapan section.

Carney Hospital said a woman suffered arm cuts from broken glass and a 15-year-old girl was cut in the head from the stonings Tuesday night.

Police said at least eight cars were stoned on Norfolk Street and some windshields were broken.

Police blocked off Blue Hill Avenue, a main route through Mattapan from predominantly black Roxbury, for about a mile.

Meanwhile, a white man was unconscious in poor condition at Boston City Hospital after he was dragged from his car and beaten by blacks Monday night.

A juvenile and a 19-year-old black man were arrested Tuesday on assault charges stemming from the Monday night beating.

Police said Randy Lewis, 19, of the Roxbury section was arrested Tuesday afternoon for assault with intent to murder and armed robbery. They said the assailants took the wallet of their victim, Richard Poleet, 34.

A 16-year-old black youth was accused in Juvenile Court of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, a brick, in the beating Monday night of Poleet. Police said at least four others were being sought.

Woman Killed By Tornado

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP) — A woman was killed when a tornado cut a 100-yard swath through two trailer parks Tuesday night.

A spokesman for the sheriff's office said the woman died when her trailer was blown into a pond. She was identified by the sheriff's office as Mrs. Glenn Randall.

Four persons had been reported missing, but a spokesman for Natchitoches' Civil Defense office said all were later accounted for.

A spokesman for Natchitoches Parish Hospital said 23 persons were being treated for various injuries.

Supermarket Price Wars Scattered

By The Associated Press

Price wars are bringing savings to supermarket shoppers in widely scattered areas of the country as food stores step up their competition for customers. Industry spokesmen say the lower prices are likely to continue — at least for a while.

The industry doesn't like the term "price war," but spokesmen concede that stores are unusually eager to advertise specials. "We're in a period of intensifying price competition," said Dick Bragaw of the Super Market Institute, a Chicago-based trade association.

Bragaw said the retail savings are "fairly widespread," both geographically and along the supermarket shelves. "There have been a lot of price declines (at the wholesale level) in the last year. We've had good crop years," he said when asked to explain the cuts.

Is the trend going to continue? "I think it is," said Bragaw. "The kind of growth we looked for a decade ago — new homes, new people — isn't there," he said.

So if the market doesn't expand, the stores must become increasingly competitive to attract existing business and that means lower prices, Bragaw said.

In Chicago, where price wars have been continuing, off and on, for about a year, the Chicago Tribune reported that a survey showed prices for several items, including sugar and flour, have dropped sharply, in some cases to levels lower than April 1975.

The savings varied from store to store, however. The price of a can of tuna fish, for example, was up in three chains and down at one over the past 12 months.

Krogers, a Cincinnati-based chain, ran newspaper advertisements headlined "Prices Go Down." Among the items it said were reduced in price were ketchup which was on sale for 65 cents, a dime off the regular price, and fabric softener at $1.54, 45 cents off the regular price.

Supermarket News, a trade publication, also reported increasing emphasis on price — either directly through price wars or indirectly through increased coupon offers — in San Antonio, Tex., Atlanta, parts of California, Kansas City and the New York metropolitan area.

One of the most heated price wars was in San Antonio, Tex., where an independent retailers group asked the Federal Trade Commission to investigate. The FTC office in Dallas refused to either confirm or deny that an investigation was taking place.

A spokesman for the National Association of Food Chains, in Washington, D.C., said one reason for the price wars was that "the industry is in a real problem stage right now," faced with steadily rising fixed costs for items such as labor, rent and utilities. "As a result," the spokesman said, "the competitive pressure really heats up."

Since many of the costs are fixed and cannot be reduced, "the easiest way to generate profits is to get more customers," the spokesman said.

Profits for supermarket chains generally have been running at less than 1 per cent of sales in recent years. Last year, according to the food chain association, profits were .68 per cent of sales. That means that 68 cents of every $100 you spend at the supermarket goes to profit.

The Federal Trade Commission, in a report for the third quarter of 1975, said that food retailers' profits as a return of equity, or total business worth, were 9.9 per cent — up from 9.5 per cent in 1974. Profits for all retailers in the third quarter of 1975 were 12.1 per cent of equity, according to the FTC.

In the Bay Area of California, retailers have been hurrying to claim that they offer lower prices than their competitors.

Safeway advertised "thousands of reduced prices' and "a new low-level pricing policy." Lucky Stores countered with: "Lucky immediately passes on the savings to you."

How long will it last? No one is sure, although the industry spokesmen say business conditions are likely to keep competition stiff for the next few months.

MEAT COOKING KNOW HOW

Various kinds of meat...beef, pork, veal, lamb...can be grouped into two broad classifications of cooking methods. One group will be tender when prepared with dry heat, such as uncovered in an oven, on a broiler grill, over a charcoal fire, or in an uncovered frying pan. The other group will require moist cooking in order to be tender. Moist cooking includes braising, stewing, pot roasting and cooking in liquid. It's important to know which method of cooking is required for each cut of meat purchased. If you have any questions on the cooking method, just ask the meat man behind the counter. He'll be glad to tell you.

Some basic meat cooking methods are explained here:

ROASTING:	Season meat with salt and pepper; place fat side up on rack in open pan. Insert meat thermometer, if desired. Do not add water and do not cover. Roast in slow to moderate oven (300° to 350°F.)
BROILING:	Set oven regulator to broil; place meat on grill about 2 to 5 inches from heat. Brown on one side; turn and brown other. Broil to desired doneness. Season after cooking to help retain meat juices.
PAN-BROILING:	Season meat and cook uncovered in heavy, ungreased or lightly greased frying pan. Brown on both sides, pouring off fat as it accumulates.
PAN-FRYING:	Season meat and cook in small amount of hot fat in skillet, turning to brown both sides. Do not cover.
BRAISING: (POT-ROASTING)	Brown meat on both sides in small amount of hot fat in skillet. Season with salt and pepper. Add small amount of water or other liquid; cover and simmer on top of stove or in the oven till done.
BOIL: (COOKING IN LIQUID)	Brown meat first, if desired, in heavy pan. Season with salt, pepper, etc., cover with liquid. Bring to boil; reduce heat and simmer, covered, till tender.

Doubts About New Water Rates

Four City Council members Monday provided the required number of votes to adopt a new set of water rates reportedly worked out by them hand-in-hand with the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce.

The new rate schedule, dubbed "Alternate Z" by Councilman Max Denney because he believes it to be the final rate plan, appears to favor high volume residential, commercial and industrial users.

Chamber representatives and chamber friends on the council say that lower water rates for commercial and industrial firms are necessary to attract and keep job-providing employers in Lincoln.

They also contend that it is cheaper for the city to serve those customers who use water in high volume at a uniform pace. It is not easily understood, however, how the alleged cost-of-delivery savings can equitably be translated into a specific amount rate reduction.

There is another problem of fairness involved with the Alternate Z plan or any other which provides for opposite pricing structures for residential and non-residential users.

One of the reasons new water rates were decreed by the City Council early last year, in addition to the need for more revenue, was to encourage the conservation of water. Thus under rates passed last year the cost of water goes up as more water is used.

This is the same scheme used for residential users under the increasing block rate plan provided in Alternate Z and other alternates, and it makes sense. On the other hand, although non-residential users will pay a penny more per hundred cubic feet than residential users in the first increment, the cost of water sinks sharply as larger volumes of water are used by the non-residential customer. There is hardly any incentive there for conservation of water.

There probably should be an attempt at fair recognition of the cost-of-delivery savings in water rates for commercial and industrial customers.

But should residential users be charged on an increasing block rate and non-residential users on a decreasing block rate?

In an attempt to get away from the unfair and little understood base demand and excess of base demand charges written into the present rate structure, any move which places even more of a revenue-producing burden on low and medium volume residential users will be deeply resented by those people.

The impact of the Alternate Z rate plan — which can still be vetoed by Mayor Boosalis — is not readily evident to Lincoln water users.

But they have a right to be suspicious of the new plan. They may want to question why Council members Dick Baker, Steve Cook, Max Denney and Bob Sikyta found it necessary to meet at a private lunch with Chamber of Commerce representatives to put the finishing touches on the new water rate plan, and why the remaining council members were not invited to participate.

City To Stick By 'Joke'

The City Council has decided to go to court to appeal the decision of the State Liquor Control Commission granting a beer license to Dumplings Restaurant at 22nd and Nebraska Hwy.

The council had recommended denial of the Dumplings application on the grounds that the city's arbitrary quota of alcoholic beverage licenses is filled. The council has set the limit on the number of licenses at 135 and the liquor commission has usually supported the city in matters of liquor control policy.

But the city's policy of keeping an inflexible, arbitrary limit on the number of licenses in the city as it grows is both unreasonable and unrealistic.

The decision to ignore Lincoln's recommendation on the matter of maintaining an inflexible limit was bound to come in the absence of city action to deal realistically with the issue.

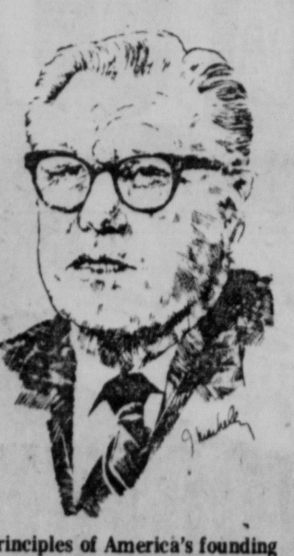
But the council insists on appealing the commission's decision thus signalling its intent to stick to an untenable policy.

Councilman Dick Baker, in the discussion of the appeal, commented that the commission's refusal to uphold the city's quota "means our liquor policy is a joke."

He's right. It is a joke. But it didn't take the liquor commission decision to point that out.

JAMES RESTON

Where Is Rocky?



WASHINGTON — Ever since Nelson Rockefeller withdrew from the 1976 vice presidential race, he has seemed to drop out of the headlines almost as completely as Spiro Agnew. What has he been doing, and where is he going, if anywhere?

Well, for one thing, he has been off talking to world leaders about what many of them regard as a serious decline in America's influence, and for another he has been preparing and delivering the best series of speeches on our internal problems of any politician on the scene today.

This is no great compliment, for as the vice president himself observed the other day, "We are not having an informed debate on the grave issues that face present day America ... In the plethora of primaries, we witness mostly personality contests — candidacies based not on party programs or issues but on personalities and promises ...

"Let's face the facts. We've been on a backward, negative kick for four years. We've been looking backward and we've been rehashing the past. It's time we face the future. It's time to determine our national self-interest. It's time we devote our energies to positive efforts for this Third Century." President Ford cannot have been amused.

Taking his own advice, Rockefeller has tried to define these present and coming issues in eight different speeches over the last two months:

—On the excessive expansion of government and the decline of authority and political parties in America;

—On the rise of selfishness, the pressures of special interest groups, and the failure of our energy policies. "One wonders at times whether we are dealing with a world of science or a world of superstition and fear . . ."

—On federal-state relations and government tax, spending, and regulatory systems, together with his own proposals for dealing with revenue-sharing, consolidation of federal aid grant programs, "100 per cent federal financing of public assistance programs," etc.

—On ethics and religion in American life. "Today, the basic principles of America's founding and its growth — its dedication to human dignity and the spiritual nature of man, its trust in free individuals taking responsibility for their actions — are being seriously challenged . . . Centrally controlled, Marxist totalitarian power is gaining ground, not losing it . . . We have faced no comparable challenges to our way of life — our very existence — in all our history."

—On food, farmers and the American future . . . on economic freedom and the need for partnership between the public and private domains . . . on the imperatives of both growth and conservation and the capacity of science to reconcile the two.

These topical sentences merely suggest the scope of Rockefeller's effort. What he has done is to interpret the work of the Critical Choices Commission he established after he left the governorship of New York, and apply it to the coming years. What is interesting is that his analysis of the future, which is pretty good, was largely ignored, because the newspapers and networks thought his political future looked fairly bleak.

Even so, Rockefeller keeps planning more speeches on the future, not because his political future is very bright, and not because he needs a job. You may like or dislike him, agree or disagree with his policies, but ever since Franklin Roosevelt brought him to this town to help Washington define a coherent policy for Latin America, which we still don't have, he has devoted his life to the public service and is still at it.

He was not surprised but he was disappointed when Nixon didn't choose him for the vice presidency after the Spiro Agnew disaster. He didn't get the authority and the responsibility he hoped for, and thought he was promised, after Ford nominated him as vice president. He sulked for a while when Ford allowed Bo Callaway and others to snipe at him as a drag on Ford's fight with Reagan for the '76 presidential election.

But after a while, he took refuge in the future and its problems, and is still supporting the President, without always supporting the President's policies. They have come to terms with each other on this compromise, and he will be active in the President's election campaign, but after that, what?

Rockefeller has always said he would not now accept anything less than the vice presidency, but this awkward job never fit his temperament or character. He is good at the tireless duties of government ceremony, but essentially he is a man of action with a gift of recruiting men of thought. Most people have problems imposed on them and resent it, but ironically, life imposed few problems on Rockefeller personally, yet he chose a life of problem-solving.

If President Ford wins in November, he will be looking for a secretary of state to replace Kissinger, who came to the top of government life here on Rockefeller's recommendation. And even if Ford doesn't win, Rockefeller has the respect of the leaders of the Democratic Party, and will undoubtedly have the opportunity, if he wants it, of continued public service.

Meanwhile, though he wouldn't like the phrase, he will undoubtedly play the role of the elder statesman, thinking about the coming age, with his customary optimism. It is a useful role, and while nobody is paying much attention to what he says, he is about the only experienced politician on the stage who is seeking out the best brains in the country and trying to play it.

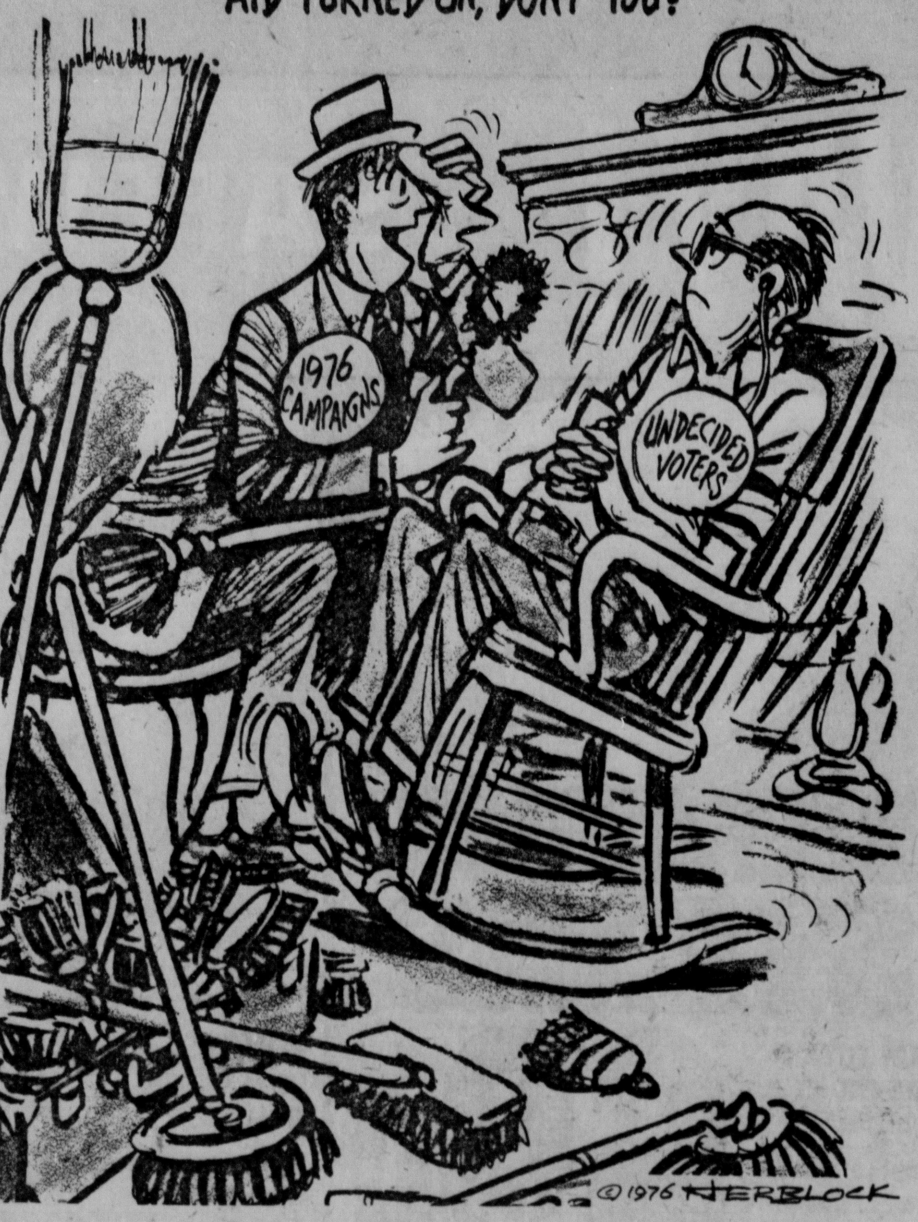
"I SAID, SIR, YOU DO HAVE YOUR HEARING AID TURNED ON, DON'T YOU?"



RUSSELL BAKER

Electrifying Moments

WASHINGTON — Dr. George Trot invented the public opinion poll in 1775 and brought it to Philadelphia the following spring to show it to John Adams. "How does it work?" asked Adams.

"It gives you an instant reading on how the colonists feel about any controversial issue," Trot said.

"You're spoofing me," said Adams.

"Just watch," said Trot, and he polled a scientifically selected sample of the population to find how public opinion rated the way King George was handling his job.

Adams examined the results with dismay. They were as follows:

King doing excellent job: 3%
King doing good job: 6%
King doing fair job: 8%
King doing poor job: 6%
King doing lousy job: 3%
Don't know: 74%

"Stay right here, and don't go away," said Adams, locking Trot in his room. And he went to see Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson.

"This is extraordinary," Jefferson said. "To think that 26% of the population has any interest at all in politics. Incredible!"

Adams said Jefferson had misread the poll. "What's terrible," he said, "is that 74% haven't enough interest to have an opinion about that tyrant, George. If this gets out, the case for the Revolution is doomed."

Both turned to Franklin for advice. Franklin said it might be a mistake, and they should ask Trot to conduct another poll.

Thereupon, Trot asked his scientifically selected sample whether it preferred a monarchic or republican form of government. The results were:

Favor monarchy: 13%
Favor republicanism: 14%
Undecided: 73%

Again Adams locked up Trot, this time in his closet.

"It looks bad, all right," Jefferson said.

"Bad!" snorted Franklin. "It's disastrous. If these figures get out, we'll wind up with Hubert Humphrey again."

At that prospect, they all had a stiff round of hot buttered rum, easy on the butter.

"I suppose," said Jefferson, "if we weren't the Founding Fathers and didn't have to set such high ethical standards for the men destined to come after us, we could doctor the polls."

Adams was infuriated by this suggestion. He said he would never be a Founding Father to a nation whose politicians misrepresented the facts to the people.

Franklin calmed them and ordered another round of hot buttered rums, skip the butter. "It would be but a temporary expedient in any event," he said, "since sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. If we can doctor the polls, so can our opponents."

"My feeling," said Jefferson, "is that there comes a time in the course of human events when a decent respect for the opinion of mankind may justify strong measures to ensure that the opinion of mankind corresponds to our own."

Franklin urged him to hush. He said Jefferson was not getting to the heart of the evil. "The true evil," he observed, "is the invention of this public opinion poll. Unless it is crushed in its cradle, it will grow and flourish until no statesman will know what to think until he knows what is being thought by those of his countrymen for whom is he supposed to be doing the thinking."

"The invention must be destroyed?" asked Adams.

"Absolutely," said Franklin. That night he unlocked Trot's closet and introduced himself as one man of science to another. Trot was delighted to meet a fellow in human progress. Franklin suggested that Trot might like to participate in one of his famous experiments.

Trot was doubly delighted to be so honored. Franklin explained that his newest experiment called for flying a kite into an electrical storm while the kite-flyer stood in a pool of water holding a large piece of metal. He asked Trot to be that kite-flyer. Trot was honored to accept. The experiment was conducted that night and failed tragically.

This is why 1776 later gave us the Declaration of Independence instead of Hubert Humphrey.

Making It Last

The United States is on the eve of her 200th birthday and we as Americans take great pride in preparing for this memorial event. Our bicentennial spirit takes form in a range anywhere from waving our flags to wildly painting the country red, white and blue.

I am in no way down-grading the Bicentennial spirit — it is all fine and good. I am happy to see so many people putting aside their time to unite with others in recapturing in many ways exciting American history.

I don't believe, however, that the Bicentennial should be only a time for looking back but also a time for grasping present opportunities so that with continued American ingenuity, we can proudly announce another 200 years from now — "I AM PROUD TO BE AN AMERICAN!"

No More Trains, Please!

Lincoln, Neb.

We, the boys and girls of Room 200 at Park Elementary School, would like the citizens of Lincoln to help us stop the proposal that would have many more trains going through our neighborhood. It would be bad to have so many more trains because the vibration from the trains would shake our houses down over a short period of time.

They plan to shut off all streets between A and J Streets. This would be bad because an ambulance would have trouble getting to people who might have heart attacks on the other side of the tracks. If there were a fire, fire engines would have trouble getting to the houses on the west side of the tracks. The police would have trouble getting there, if there were a robbery.

The railroad projects as many as 40 coal trains a day, none of which would be leaving its load in Lincoln. Why have such trains to cause disturbances in our city?

The proposal would cause such a hassle among the neighborhood residents that many would soon move away. We have a nice neighborhood now. We don't want our neighborhood wrecked. If people start leaving the Park School District, they may close our school down. We wouldn't have our friends to play with.

So please help us stop the trains from being put through our neighborhood.

Why can't the news media through their sources gather information as to what the government documents contained taken from E. Howard Hunt's safe — so sensitive that John Dean told the then director of the FBI, Patrick Gray, that they "should not see the light of day" and which Patrick Gray admitted he burned? Now, while the Watergate scandal is being rehashed, would be a good time to complete that part of the scandal never exposed nor completed.

It seems the media want to go back no further than 1968, as though Watergate and bureaucracy were hatched since then. I believe the documents would have revealed information on spies existing for the past 55-60 years, but that they were not then on the government payroll, which led up to the present bureaucracy and Watergate.

Even the least intelligent should know that it took longer than eight years.

Reagan's California Record

Lincoln, Neb.

The American people should stop tolerating flaws in our present foreign policies. The Ford administration has been wandering aimlessly in regard to a foreign policy in Africa when it should already have had one.

Of all the presidential candidates, Ronald Reagan has by far the most sophisticated views on foreign affairs. If the American people were to elect him, this would be a signal to the Soviets that they would not be allowed any more Angolas.

Reagan also has the best record in regard to economic matters. When he became governor of California, he turned a New York City type economic situation into a position such that if California had been a nation, it would have been the seventh wealthiest nation in the world.

He also removed those individuals from the welfare rolls who were merely going along for the ride, and raised the benefits of the truly needy by 40%.

An ounce of efficiency administered to our present domestic programs could even lower our taxes.

Who Spent Your $$$ For What?

NEW YORK — Has the federal government grown too big to serve the American people well?

In the course of mildly disputing the proposition that it has — a proposition which has become a central cliche of the 1976 election — I wrote on March 19 that "the federal budget as a proportion of Gross National Product . . . has held steady at about 20% since 1953."

A number of readers quickly wrote to say that this assertion was at best questionable and at worst wrong. One of the most thoughtful of these communications was from William Poole, professor of economics at Brown University, who observed that the selection of 1953 as a referrent was "not quite fair since 1953 included expenditures connected with the Korean War."

Comparing 1955 and 1974 instead, he found that federal expenditures as a percentage of GNP had increased from 17.1% to 21.3%; and while both figures are "about" or close to 20%, Poole went on inexorably to point out that the percentage of increase was, in fact, 24.6%.

"Nevertheless," he wrote, "I think you are quite correct in emphazing that federal expenditures per se have not surged in the dramatic fashion some would have us believe." He proceeded to make two points worth paraphrasing:

—Despite lurid charges about the growth of the federal government, state and local governments have been growing at a faster rate — almost doubling their consumption of GNP in the same 1955-1974 period when federal government expenditures rose from 17.1 to 21.3%. In those 19 years, state and local spending as a per cent of GNP rose from 8.2 to 14.8%. (Both the federal percentage and the state-local percentage include federal grants-in-aid to state and local governments.)

But the political outcry — much of it from two former state governors, Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter — has been about the growth of federal spending. Reagan even wanted to turn $90 billion of federal programs back to the states.

—Federal government purchases — of such things as weapons systems, buildings, services of administrators, teachers, etc. — actually declined from 11.1% to 7.9% of GNP in the 1955-1974 period, while state and local purchases rose sharply from 7.7% to 13.5% of GNP. Purchases by all governments rose, as a result, only from 18.8% in 1955 to 21.4% in 1974.

So what is the outcry all about? Why has it found such an eager response? The figures above point like an arrow to the answer — government transfers of income from one person to another, rather than government purchases of goods and services. In fact, in the 1955-1974 period, government transfers from person to person as a per cent of all personal income rose from 5.2% to 11.6% — more than doubling. As Poole pointed out, that means that government "transfers to persons . . . now account for about one dollar of every eight in personal income."

So total government expenditures — federal, state and local — have grown to 35% of GNP not because government has been using more resources but because government has been transferring resources from some citizens to other citizens — taxing some of us to make welfare payments to others, for the most notorious example.

Since income maintenance and other transfer programs are themselves often the target of political attack, the real resentments evident among voters on the size-of-government issue probably reflect resentment mostly at transfer programs. To the extent, therefore, that any candidate actually is prepared and would be able, once in office, to do something about the size of government, it is reasonable to suppose that his target would more likely be transfer programs than the mere 7.9% of GNP that federal government purchases represented in 1974.

Poole's conclusions are not much different from what I tried to suggest in the March 19 article — that a blanket condemnation or defense of "Big Government" makes little sense, and talking in terms of "pro" or "anti" government doesn't make much more. The question is certainly not whether there should be a government, nor is it how large or small government should be. The question is what government ought to do.

Political candidates, therefore, would more nearly educate the public — if public education were their goal — by discussing their views on a rational and proper division of functions between government, at whatever level, and private activity. One subject that particularly needs more political discussion and public concern is government regulation of business activity — but that's also a subject that doesn't yield to tricky slogans and glib pronouncements.

Doubts About New Water Rates

Four City Council members Monday provided the required number of votes to adopt a new set of water rates reportedly worked out by them hand-in-hand with the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce.

The new rate schedule, dubbed "Alternate Z" by Councilman Max Denney because he believes it to be the final rate plan, appears to favor high volume residential, commercial and industrial users.

Chamber representatives and chamber friends on the council say that lower water rates for commercial and industrial firms are necessary to attract and keep job-providing employers in Lincoln.

They also contend that it is cheaper for the city to serve those customers who use water in high volume at a uniform pace. It is not easily understood, however, how the alleged cost-of-delivery savings can equitably be translated into a specific amount rate reduction.

There is another problem of fairness involved with the Alternate Z plan or any other which provides for opposite pricing structures for residential and non-residential users.

One of the reasons new water rates were decreed by the City Council early last year, in addition to the need for more revenue, was to encourage the conservation of water. Thus under rates passed last year the cost of water goes up as more water is used.

This is the same scheme used for residential users under the increasing block rate plan provided in Alternate Z and other alternates, and it makes sense. On the other hand, although non-residential users will pay a penny more per hundred cubic feet than residential users in the first increment, the cost of water sinks sharply as larger volumes of water are used by the non-residential customer. There is hardly any incentive there for conservation of water.

There probably should be an attempt at fair recognition of the cost-of-delivery savings in water rates for commercial and industrial customers.

But should residential users be charged on an increasing block rate and non-residential users on a decreasing block rate?

In an attempt to get away from the unfair and little understood base demand and excess of base demand charges written into the present rate structure, any move which places even more of a revenue-producing burden on low and medium volume residential users will be deeply resented by those people.

The impact of the Alternate Z rate plan — which can still be vetoed by Mayor Boosalis — is not readily evident to Lincoln water users.

But they have a right to be suspicious of the new plan. They may want to question why Council members Dick Baker, Steve Cook, Max Denney and Bob Sikyta found it necessary to meet at a private lunch with Chamber of Commerce representatives to put the finishing touches on the new water rate plan, and why the remaining council members were not invited to participate.

City To Stick By 'Joke'

The City Council has decided to go to court to appeal the decision of the State Liquor Control Commission granting a beer license to Dumplings Restaurant at 22nd and Nebraska Hwy.

The council had recommended denial of the Dumplings application on the grounds that the city's arbitrary quota of alcoholic beverage licenses is filled. The council has set the limit on the number of licenses at 135 and the liquor commission has usually supported the city in matters of liquor control policy.

But the city's policy of keeping an inflexible, arbitrary limit on the number of licenses in the city as it grows is both unreasonable and unrealistic.

The decision to ignore Lincoln's recommendation on the matter of maintaining an inflexible limit was bound to come in the absence of city action to deal realistically with the issue.

But the council insists on appealing the commission's decision thus signalling its intent to stick to an untenable policy.

Councilman Dick Baker, in the discussion of the appeal, commented that the commission's refusal to uphold the city's quota "means our liquor policy is a joke."

He's right. It is a joke. But it didn't take the liquor commission decision to point that out.

JAMES RESTON

Where Is Rocky?

WASHINGTON — Ever since Nelson Rockefeller withdrew from the 1976 vice presidential race, he has seemed to drop out of the headlines almost as completely as Spiro Agnew. What has he been doing, and where is he going, if anywhere?

Well, for one thing, he has been off talking to world leaders about what many of them regard as a serious decline in America's influence, and for another he has been preparing and delivering the best series of speeches on our internal problems of any politician on the scene today.

This is no great compliment, for as the vice president himself observed the other day, "We are not having an informed debate on the grave issues that face present day America ... In the plethora of primaries, we witness mostly personality contests — candidacies based not on party programs or issues but on personalities and promises ...

"Let's face the facts. We've been on a backward, negative kick for four years. We've been looking backward and we've been rehashing the past. It's time we face the future. It's time to determine our national self-interest. It's time we devote our energies to positive efforts for this Third Century." President Ford cannot have been amused.

Taking his own advice, Rockefeller has tried to define these present and coming issues in eight different speeches over the last two months

—On the excessive expansion of government and the decline of authority and political parties in America.

—On the rise of selfishness, the pressures of special interest groups, and the failure of our energy policies. "One wonders at times whether we are dealing with a world of science or a world of superstition and fear ..."

—On federal-state relations and government tax spending and regulatory systems together with his own proposals for dealing with revenue-sharing consolidation of federal aid grant programs, 100 per cent federal financing of public assistance programs etc

—On ethics and religion in American life. "Today, the basic principles of America's founding and its growth — its dedication to human dignity and the spiritual nature of man, its trust in free individuals taking responsibility for their actions — are being seriously challenged .... Centrally controlled, Marxist totalitarian power is gaining ground, not losing it ... We have faced no comparable challenges to our way of life — our very existence — in all our history."

—On food, farmers and the American future ... on economic freedom and the need for partnership between the public and private domains ... on the imperatives of both growth and conservation and the capacity of science to reconcile the two

These topical sentences merely suggest the scope of Rockefeller's effort. What he has done is to interpret the work of the Critical Choices Commission he established after he left the governorship of New York, and apply it to the coming years. What is interesting is that his analysis of the future, which is pretty good, was largely ignored, because the newspapers and networks thought his political future looked fairly bleak

Even so Rockefeller keeps planning more speeches on the future not because his political future is very bright and not because he needs a job You may like or dislike him agree or disagree with his policies but ever since Franklin Roosevelt brought him to this town to help Washington define a coherent policy for Latin America which we still don't have, he has devoted his life to the public service and is still at it.

He was not surprised but he was disappointed when Nixon didn't choose him for the vice presidency after the Spiro Agnew disaster. He didn't get the authority and the responsibility he hoped for, and thought he was promised, after Ford nominated him as vice president. He sulked for a while when Ford allowed Bo Callaway and others to snipe at him as a drag on Ford's fight with Reagan for the '76 presidential election.

But after a while, he took refuge in the future and its problems, and is still supporting the President, without always supporting the President's policies. They have come to terms with each other on this compromise, and he will be active in the President's election campaign, but after that, what?

Rockefeller has always said he would not now accept anything less than the vice presidency, but this awkward job never fit his temperament or character. He is good at the tireless duties of government ceremony, but essentially he is a man of action with a gift of recruiting men of thought. Most people have problems imposed on them and resent it, but ironically, life imposed few problems on Rockefeller personally, yet he chose a life of problem-solving.

If President Ford wins in November, he will be looking for a secretary of state to replace Kissinger, who came to the top of government life here on Rockefeller's recommendation. And even if Ford doesn't win, Rockefeller has the respect of the leaders of the Democratic Party, and will undoubtedly have the opportunity, if he wants it, of continued public service.

Meanwhile though he wouldn't like the phrase he will undoubtedly play the role of the elder statesman thinking about the coming age with his customary optimism It is a useful role and while nobody is paying much attention to what he says, he is about the only experienced politician on the stage who is seeking out the best brains in the country and trying to play it

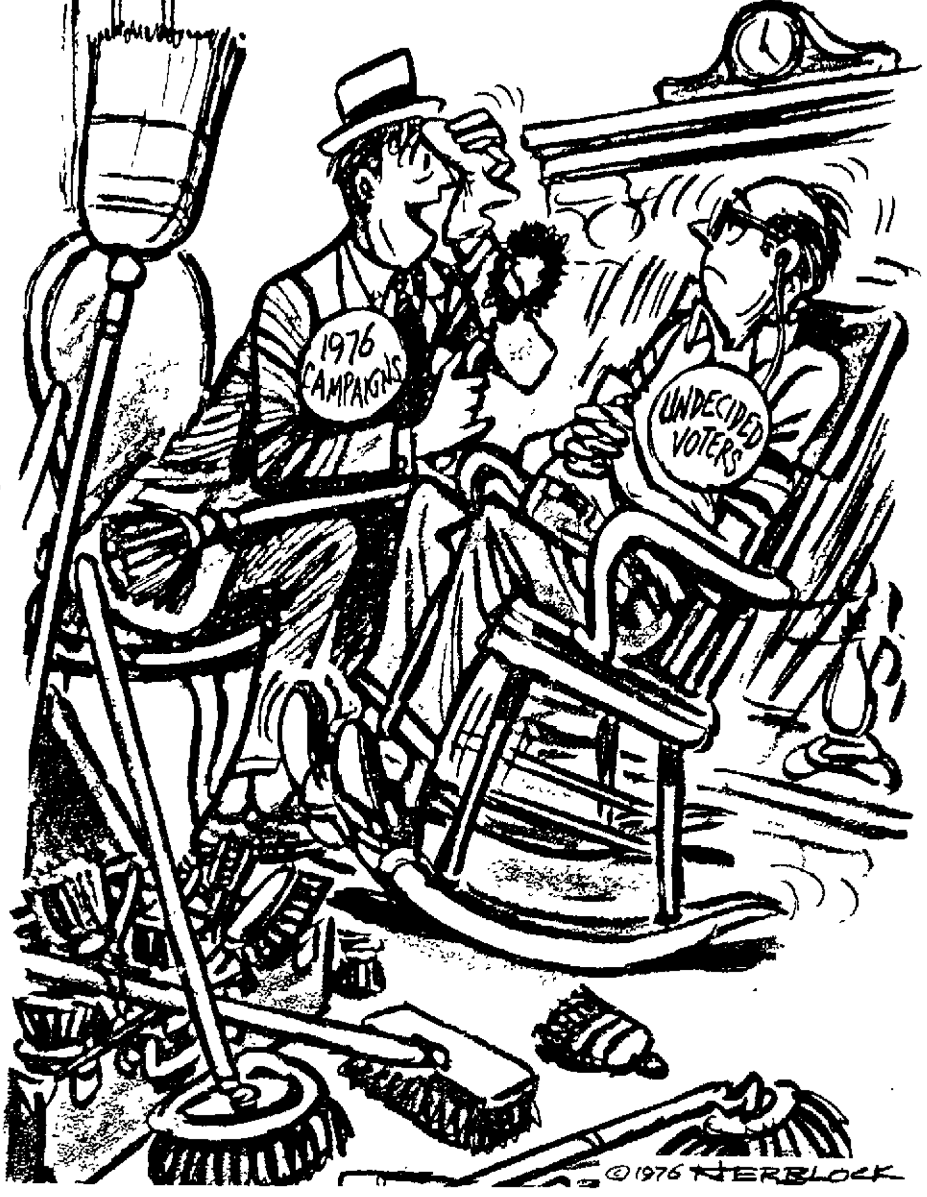
"I SAID, SIR, YOU DO HAVE YOUR HEARING AID TURNED ON, DON'T YOU?"



RUSSELL BAKER

Electrifying Moments

WASHINGTON — Dr. George Trot invented the public opinion poll in 1775 and brought it to Philadelphia the following spring to show it to John Adams. "How does it work?" asked Adams.

"It gives you an instant reading on how the colonists feel about any controversial issue," Trot said.

"You're spoofing me," said Adams.

"Just watch," said Trot, and he polled a scientifically selected sample of the population to find how public opinion rated the way King George was handling his job.

Adams examined the results with dismay. They were as follows:

King doing excellent job: 3%
King doing good job: 6%
King doing fair job: 8%
King doing poor job: 6%
King doing lousy job: 3%
Don't know: 74%

"Stay right here, and don't go away," said Adams, locking Trot in his room. And he went to see Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson.

"This is extraordinary," Jefferson said. "To think that 26% of the population has any interest at all in politics. Incredible!"

Adams said Jefferson had misread the poll. "What's terrible," he said, "is that 74% haven't enough interest to have an opinion about that tyrant, George. If this gets out, the case for the Revolution is doomed."

Both turned to Franklin for advice. Franklin said it might be a mistake, and they should ask Trot to conduct another poll.

Thereupon, Trot asked his scientifically selected sample whether it preferred a monarchic or republican form of government. The results were:

Favor monarchy: 13%
Favor republicanism: 14%
Undecided: 73%

Again Adams locked up Trot, this time in his closet.

"It looks bad, all right," Jefferson said.

"Bad!" snorted Franklin. "It's disastrous. If these figures get out, we'll wind up with Hubert Humphrey again."

At that prospect, they all had a stiff round of hot buttered rum, easy on the butter.

"I suppose," said Jefferson, "if we weren't the Founding Fathers and didn't have to set such high ethical standards for the men destined to come after us, we could doctor the polls."

Adams was infuriated by this suggestion. He said he would never be a Founding Father to a nation whose politicians misrepresented the facts to the people.

Franklin calmed them and ordered another round of hot buttered rums, skip the butter. "It would be but a temporary expedient in any event," he said, "since sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. If we can doctor the polls, so can our opponents."

"My feeling," said Jefferson, "is that there comes a time in the course of human events when a decent respect for the opinion of mankind may justify strong measures to ensure that the opinion of mankind corresponds to our own."

Franklin urged him to hush. He said Jefferson was not getting to the heart of the evil. "The true evil," he observed, "is the invention of this public opinion poll. Unless it is crushed in its cradle, it will grow and flourish until no statesman will know what to think until he knows what is being thought by those of his countrymen for whom is he supposed to be doing the thinking."

"The invention must be destroyed?" asked Adams.

"Absolutely," said Franklin. That night he unlocked Trot's closet and introduced himself as one man of science to another. Trot was delighted to meet a fellow in human progress. Franklin suggested that Trot might like to participate in one of his famous experiments.

Trot was doubly delighted to be so honored. Franklin explained that his newest experiment called for flying a kite into an electrical storm while the kite-flyer stood in a pool of water holding a large piece of metal. He asked Trot to be that kite-flyer. Trot was honored to accept. The experiment was conducted that night and failed tragically.

This is why 1776 later gave us the Declaration of Independence instead of Hubert Humphrey.

SeTech Board Moving Toward Single Campus

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

The use of either Whittier or Bryan Schools for a Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College campus in Lincoln is an idea on its way out.

And the SeTech board is also moving away from the scattered campus concept in Lincoln and closer to a decision on constructing a new single campus, according to several people who attended a closed door session of the board Tuesday afternoon.

"It appears that the board is no longer interested in Whittier and Bryan Schools," said one person attending the meeting.

The purchase of either of the two public schools had been suggested to solve the Lincoln campus problem.

And continued use of leased space in six buildings throughout the city is also inadequate, according to a building study report released last month.

The other alternative, building a new $6.7 million campus, was endorsed by the board in December, 1974. But a majority of the board was replaced at the polls and the new board wanted to make its own decision on the Lincoln campus question.

And indications are that the board is "moving closer" toward construction of a new campus. "The facility committee is giving serious attention to new sites and new solutions," said another person at the closed door session where the options were discussed.

More than $229,000 is being spent to lease about 90,000 square feet in various buildings throughout Lincoln.

And the Lincoln programs will need about 169,000 square feet within the next three years for current and projected programs, said Dr. David Buettner, director of the Lincoln campus.

New construction could be supported with up to 1 mill of the 2.5 mill maximum the board can levy. That would bring in about $6 million during the next five years, said Dr. Robert Eichert, area director.

Petition No Help; Marcy Still Fired From SeTech

Dr. D. Eugene Marcy, Fairbury campus director for Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College, who was fired by the SeTech board last month, remained fired this month.

After listening to student requests to reinstate the 43-year-old Marcy and discussing the situation during a closed door session, the board took no action.

And that means "the previous action stands," said Board Chairman Robert Wekesser after the marathon six-hour board meeting.

Sandy Compton, a Fairbury freshman student, asked the board to reconsider its decision last month to fire Marcy effective June 30. "We want to keep Dr. Marcy," she said.

Miss Compton presented the board with petitions signed by 120 of the 256 Fairbury students, expressing support for the Marcy administration and his record the past two years.

The petitions said a "change now would be detrimental to the future of the Fairbury campus." The half of the student body who didn't sign the petitions "got in trouble with some of the faculty (who are) opposing Dr. Marcy" and were "afraid to sign," she said.

Referring to a Fairbury faculty poll to determine confidence in Marcy, Miss Compton said, "Several of the teachers that had voted against him said (to students), 'If you sign and I find out, it could cause trouble'."

No pressure was applied to get signatures on the non-student government-sanctioned petitions, she said.

"I don't believe it," Lloyd Wright of Reynolds retorted.

Miss Compton also asked the board to consider establishing non-voting student member seats. "The students weren't really consulted" on the Marcy decision that came by surprise after a closed board session, she said.

In other business, the board:

—Agreed to buy for $9,000 three acres adjacent to the SeTech Milford campus for a women's dormitory and storage site. Board members discussed but took no action on buying more than three acres for future development.

—Authorized building plans to proceed on the Fairbury campus student center, but directed a May report on additional costs beyond the $59,000 student fund, to include utility hook-ups, site preparation, later brick facing for possible board support. The center will be completed by fall 1976.

—Rejected a proposed Equal Employment Opportunity Commission contract on a discrimination complaint over the board's policy of providing an unpaid maternity leave.

—Increased tuition and fees at the three campuses. Fairbury campus in-state tuition will go from $135 to $150 per semester; and Lincoln and Milford campuses from $90 per quarter to $100 per quarter. Out-state tuition will go from $216 to $240 per semester at Fairbury and $144 to $160 per quarter at the Lincoln and Milford.

—Increased room and board rates at the three campuses. The Milford increase includes a student-recommended hike so meat will be served at every breakfast and a 6 oz. steak served once a week.

—Approved the concept of building a community center on the Fairbury campus with the understanding that the board would withdraw support if negotiations on details of the joint city-school venture show the building will not benefit the campus. The concept is for the city to build the community center using a $300,000 Housing and Urban Development grant, for use by both the city and the school.

Mitzner Testimony Links Tags To Peery

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Through the testimony of the slain woman's husband, prosecutors tried Tuesday to link coins, a price tag, an envelope of coin holders and a cigarette lighter with the Mitzner Coin Shop.

Testimony from Kenneth Mitzner, 52, came Tuesday as the trial of Wesley H. Peery on a charge of first degree murder and robbery ended its eighth day.

Mrs. Marianne Mitzner was found bound and gagged in the bathroom of the coin shop on June 6, 1975. She had been shot three times in the head.

Under questioning by Lancaster County Attorney Ron Lahners, Mitzner said a package of coin holders police testified was found on the dash of Peery's Cadillac bore a price in one corner in his wife's handwriting.

Mitzner said a price tag police also found in Peery's Cadillac was similar to those he had on watches that were stolen from his shop.

A Zippo cigarette lighter taken from Peery after his arrest June 26 was similar to those stolen from his shop, Mitzner said, but he added that it was a common lighter.

As he testified in preliminary hearings in the case, Mitzner said he believes coins found in a tool box in Mary Blazek's closet came from his store.

Mitzner said the coins were cleaned ultrasonically and some carried lacquer which produced a reddish-blue "rainbowing effect."

For the same reason, Mitzner testified Tuesday, he believes some of the coins taken from the purse of Mary Blazek, Peery's girlfriend, also came from his shop.

More than 2,250 coins were taken from the store, Mitzner said, as well as watches and cigarette lighters. Combined, the articles had a value of about $22,500, he said.

The coins, in 121 boxes measuring two inches by two inches by 12 inches, would have weighed about 140 to 150 pounds, Mitzner said.

Mitzner said the articles in the shop were not insured against theft and that his wife had only a $1,000 policy.

"I had stocked the store heavily" shortly before the shooting, Mitzner testified, because he had to begin serving a four-month sentence for the interstate transportation of stolen coins on June 1, 1975.

Mitzner testified he was in jail when police told him his wife had been shot. He was taken to the coin shop, where he made a preliminary invetory that day to determine what had been taken.

Walters said 1975 was a satisfactory year for the company, but added several major lines of business in the company showed large increases in loss ratios.

William R. Berkley was elected chairman of the board, and Maurice R. Gerleman was elected vicechairman. Other directors re-elected were Robert G. Walters, L. Dean Fletcher and William H. Malone.

Other officers elected were Dale E. Graul, vice president-financial, secretary and treasurer; L. Dean Fletcher, executive vice president-operations; William H. Malone, senior vice president-claims; O. H. Stewart, vice president-commercial lines; Loren D. Graul, vice president-casualty lines; Elton D. Severns, vice president-property lines, and Howard DuBois, vice president and agency director.

Air Mail Sure, But Landing On Stamp Ridiculous

Rural Lincolnite Robert E. Jordan got a harrowing welcome back to flying Tuesday — an emergency landing in a field "that looked about the size of a postage stamp."

Jordan, his 11-year-old son Lane and Lincoln Aviation Institute instructor Tom Cuming had been flying about an hour when the carburetor iced up, killing the light plane's engine.

Jordan, trying to requalify for a pilot's license, radioed the control tower while Cuming landed the plane in a field just short of the main runway.

"It was the first time my son had been up in several years and it was quite harrowing for him," Jordan said.

The three were uninjured, and the plane suffered very minor damage. Fire rigs rushed to the scene but weren't needed.

Not one to be easily discouraged, Jordan said he and Cuming will brave the airways again today.

Political Study Is Aim Of New Grant At UNL

A team of University of Nebraska-Lincoln political science faculty members will research U.S. congressional committees and subcommittees through a University of Nebraska Foundation grant.

The $140,000 grant was made by a donor who wishes to remain anonymous. Foundation President Harry R. Haynie said the donor is interested in seeking ways to improve governmental operations through research.

UNL Interim Chancellor Adam C. Breckenridge will be project director for the research.

Limousines Can't Get To Parking Area

The manager of the Airport Limousine Service Tuesday complained to the Lincoln Airport Authority about illegal parking in front of the terminal.

John Kleekamp told the board the limousine service rents 44 feet of curb space which it is unable to get to during peak flight times.

Executive Director Rolland Harr said the only solution would be to employ cadets to police parking at all times.

The board also was told United Airlines will offer two nonstop and one direct flight to Chicago daily.

The flights will start June 11 on an experimental basis for the summer. The non-stop flights will leave at noon and 5:15 p.m. The direct flight will leave at 8:55 a.m.

In other action, the board decided to spend as much as $20,000 of its promotion fund to urge Lincolnites to use local facilities instead of the Omaha terminal.

The board voted to allow Clark's Compass Room to decrease its operating hours by opening at 6:30 a.m. instead of 5:30 a.m. and to close not earlier than 11 p.m.

County OKs Marina License Again

For the third time in less than a year the Lancaster County Board has approved an off-sale beer license for the Branched Oak Lake marina.

After hearing many of the old arguments — drinking enforcement problems, neighbors' concern with the character of the recreation area and their own communities — and a few new twists, the board unanimously recommended that the license be granted.

That recommendation will go to the State Liquor Commission which will make the final decision.

Travis Burney, attorney for many of the residents opposed to the liquor license for Inland Shores Marina, suggested that the marina may have breached its lease agreement with the State Game and Parks Commission. He asked the commissioners to take no action.

The lease agreement called for the marina to make monthly and annual gross sales statements and to pay 2% of the gross sales as a part of the lease costs.

But according to informtion Burney supplied the board, the company has not made any financial report since 1974.

He also contended that the marina company was "loophole leaping" by using a building built in the flood plain and thus on federal land for the beer sales outlet.

Beer consumption and sale is allowed on the federally owned land at the park, but not on the state-owned land which surrounds the water and flood plain area.

But Commissioner Jan Gauger said that these were administrative matters between the company and the state agency, matters which the county has no legal authority to get involved in.

If the marina had been in business for a year and there were a long list of valid reasons why the license should not be renewed, then the board could recommend denial of the license, Chairman Bruce Hamilton said.

"But they haven't even sold one can of beer," he pointed out.

The board approved the original license request in August. After the State Liquor Commission denied the license, a new application came to the board, and in mid-December the commissioners again gave a positive recommendation on the beer sale at Branched Oak.

When seven county residents filed written complaints before the May 1 deadline when all county liquor licenses are automatically renewed, the board again had to hold a public hearing and vote.

In other action, the board approved the appointment of Barbara Deselms to the Lancaster County Child Care Advisory Committee and asked the county attorney's office to look over a request to renew a bingo amusement license for the Hidden Valley Men's Golfing Association.

Closing Of Westview Recommended

The future of Westview, Lancaster County's former poor farm, may finally be determined at next Tuesday's County Board meeting.

After 10 months of study, an 11-member committee has recommended that the home, located seven miles north of Lincoln, be closed by the end of June and the current 16 clients be placed in local nursing homes or group homes.

The commissioners briefly discussed the alternatives to closing Westview during their Tuesday morning staff meeting, but will make no action until after a public hearing next week.

Commissioner Bob Colin, who has long supported retaining the Westview facility, predicted a full house for the hearing.

The home, built around 1917, cannot meet state fire codes and it would take $85,000 to bring up to standards for a three-year period, the committee report said.

After three years the home would have to be gutted to the load-bearing walls and completely rebuilt in order to continue to meet fire and health codes.

The committee studied other alternatives, including building a new facility at the present site and building a facility closer to Lincoln, but concluded that the county might not want to pay the estimated $325,000 to $510,000 construction costs.

The phase-out recommendation is the least costly solution for Westview and meets current philosophy that many institutionalized persons can live successfully in an independent or semi-independent environment, according to the report.

SeTech Board Moving Toward Single Campus

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

The use of either Whittier or Bryan Schools for a Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College campus in Lincoln is an idea on its way out.

And the SeTech board is also moving away from the scattered campus concept in Lincoln and closer to a decision on constructing a new single campus, according to several people who attended a closed door session of the board Tuesday afternoon.

"It appears that the board is no longer interested in Whittier and Bryan Schools," said one person attending the meeting.

The purchase of either of the two public schools had been suggested to solve the Lincoln campus problem.

And continued use of leased space in six buildings throughout the city is also inadequate, according to a building study report released last month.

The other alternative, building a new $6.7 million campus, was endorsed by the board in December, 1974. But a majority of the board was replaced at the polls and the new board wanted to make its own decision on the Lincoln campus question.

And indications are that the board is "moving closer" toward construction of a new campus. "The facility committee is giving serious attention to new sites and new solutions," said another person at the closed door session where the options were discussed.

More than $229,000 is being spent to lease about 90,000 square feet in various buildings throughout Lincoln.

And the Lincoln programs will need about 169,000 square feet within the next three years for current and projected programs, said Dr. David Buettner, director of the Lincoln campus.

New construction could be supported with up to 1 mill of the 2.5 mill maximum the board can levy. That would bring in about $6 million during the next five years, said Dr. Robert Eichert, area director.

Petition No Help; Marcy Still Fired From SeTech

Dr. D. Eugene Marcy, Fairbury campus director for Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College, who was fired by the SeTech board last month, remained fired this month.

After listening to student requests to reinstate the 43-year-old Marcy and discussing the situation during a closed door session, the board took no action.

And that means "the previous action stands," said Board Chairman Robert Wekesser after the marathon six-hour board meeting.

Sandy Compton, a Fairbury freshman student, asked the board to reconsider its decision last month to fire Marcy effective June 30. "We want to keep Dr. Marcy," she said.

Miss Compton presented the board with petitions signed by 120 of the 256 Fairbury students, expressing support for the Marcy administration and his record the past two years.

The petitions said a "change now would be detrimental to the future of the Fairbury campus." The half of the student body who didn't sign the petitions "got in trouble with some of the faculty (who are) opposing Dr. Marcy" and were "afraid to sign," she said.

Referring to a Fairbury faculty poll to determine confidence in Marcy, Miss Compton said, "Several of the teachers that had voted against him said (to students), 'If you sign and I find out, it could cause trouble'."

No pressure was applied to get signatures on the non-student government-sanctioned petitions, she said.

"I don't believe it," Lloyd Wright of Reynolds retorted.

Miss Compton also asked the board to consider establishing non-voting student member seats. "The students weren't really consulted" on the Marcy decision that came by surprise after a closed board session, she said.

In other business, the board:

—Agreed to buy for $9,000 three acres adjacent to the SeTech Milford campus for a women's dormitory and storage site. Board members discussed but took no action on buying more than three acres for future development.

—Authorized building plans to proceed on the Fairbury campus student center, but directed a May report on additional costs beyond the $59,000 student fund, to include utility hook-ups, site preparation, later brick facing for possible board support. The center will be completed by fall 1976.

—Rejected a proposed Equal Employment Opportunity Commission contract on a discrimination complaint over the board's policy of providing an unpaid maternity leave.

—Increased tuition and fees at the three campuses. Fairbury campus in-state tuition will go from $135 to $150 per semester; and Lincoln and Milford campuses from $90 per quarter to $100 per quarter. Out-state tuition will go from $216 to $240 per semester at Fairbury and $144 to $160 per quarter at the Lincoln and Milford.

—Increased room and board rates at the three campuses. The Milford increase includes a student-recommended hike so meat will be served at every breakfast and a 6 oz. steak served once a week.

—Approved the concept of building a community center on the Fairbury campus with the understanding that the board would withdraw support if negotiations on details of the joint city-school venture show the building will not benefit the campus. The concept is for the city to build the community center using a $300,000 Housing and Urban Development grant, for use by both the city and the school.

Mitzner Testimony Links Tags To Peery

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Through the testimony of the slain woman's husband, prosecutors tried Tuesday to link coins, a price tag, an envelope of coin holders and a cigarette lighter with the Mitzner Coin Shop.

Testimony from Kenneth Mitzner, 52, came Tuesday as the trial of Wesley H. Peery on a charge of first degree murder and robbery ended its eighth day.

Mrs. Marianne Mitzner was found bound and gagged in the bathroom of the coin shop on June 6, 1975. She had been shot three times in the head.

Under questioning by Lancaster County Attorney Ron Lahners, Mitzner said a package of coin holders police testified was found on the dash of Peery's Cadillac bore a price in one corner in his wife's handwriting.

Mitzner said a price tag police also found in Peery's Cadillac was similar to those he had on watches that were stolen from his shop.

A Zippo cigarette lighter taken from Peery after his arrest June 26 was similar to those stolen from his shop, Mitzner said, but he added that it was a common lighter.

As he testified in preliminary hearings in the case, Mitzner said he believes coins found in a tool box in Mary Blazek's closet came from his store.

Mitzner said the coins were cleaned ultrasonically and some carried lacquer which produced a reddish-blue "rainbowing effect."

For the same reason, Mitzner testified Tuesday, he believes some of the coins taken from the purse of Mary Blazek, Peery's girlfriend, also came from his shop.

More than 2,250 coins were taken from the store, Mitzner said, as well as watches and cigarette lighters. Combined, the articles had a value of about $22,500, he said.

The coins, in 121 boxes measuring two inches by two inches by 12 inches, would have weighed about 140 to 150 pounds, Mitzner said.

Mitzner said the articles in the shop were not insured against theft and that his wife had only a $1,000 policy.

"I had stocked the store heavily" shortly before the shooting, Mitzner testified, because he had to begin serving a four-month sentence for the interstate transportation of stolen coins on June 1, 1975.

Mitzner testified he was in jail when police told him his wife had been shot. He was taken to the coin shop, where he made a preliminary invetory that day to determine what had been taken.

Limousines Can't Get To Parking Area

The manager of the Airport Limousine Service Tuesday complained to the Lincoln Airport Authority about illegal parking in front of the terminal

John Kleekamp told the board the limousine service rents 44 feet of curb space which it is unable to get to during peak flight times.

Executive Director Rolland Harr said the only solution would be to employ cadets to police parking at all times.

The board also was told United Airlines will offer two nonstop and one direct flight to Chicago daily.

The flights will start June 11 on an experimental basis for the summer. The non-stop flights will leave at noon and 5:15 p.m The direct flight will leave at 8:55 a.m.

In other action, the board decided to spend as much as $20,000 of its promotion fund to urge Lincolnites to use local facilities instead of the Omaha terminal.

The board voted to allow Clark's Compass Room to decrease its operating hours by opening at 6 30 a m. instead of 5.30 a m and to close not earlier than 11 p m

Segregation By Housing Department Unconstitutional

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal courts can order the government to build subsidized low-rent housing in predominantly white suburbs, the Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

In an 8-0 decision on a Chicago case that has been in the courts for 10 years, the justices rejected government arguments that court orders would unduly interfere with local authorities.

The decision touched on a current presidential campaign issue stemming from former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter's remark he could "see nothing wrong with ethnic purity being maintained" in neighborhoods. He also said he would not permit discrimination. He later apologized for using the words "ethnic purity."

The key question in the case was whether the court's 1974 decision that judges may not ordinarily order busing of pupils across school district lines also applies to housing.

The court said it does not. Such a ruling, it said, would erect "an arbitrary and mechanical shield for those found to have engaged in unconstitutional conduct."

In an opinion by Justice Potter Stewart, the court said the basis of the 1974 decision was that innocent suburbs could not be required to take steps to correct the faults of cities.

It said the housing situation was different because the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development's actions had resulted in unconstitutional segregation by concentrating public housing in black ghettos.

It said the "relevant geographic area" for correcting this was "the Chicago housing market, not the Chicago city limits."

The court's decision sends the case back to a federal judge in Chicago with instructions to consider, but not necessarily impose, a "metropolitan area order."

In Chicago, Mayor Richard J. Daley told a news conference that he agreed with the court's opinion that "the only way to do something about housing is on a metropolitan basis."

He described as "loaded" a question on whether he favored public housing in white neighborhoods. But, he said, "I'm for people living, no matter where they want to live."

Later, the Chicago lawyer whose 1966 legal brief developed into the case before the Supreme Court, said the ruling could eventually "have a significant effect on the nation's apartheid housing pattern."

Alexander Polikoff, executive director of Business and Professional People for the Public Interest, said Tuesday's ruling could "provide poor black people trapped in the ghettos with an opportunity to move out into the mostly white, mostly middle-class suburbs."

Under a federal law passed in 1974, HUD can contract directly with private owners and developers for low-income housing. Local governments have the right to comment on proposed projects, and to require that they comply with zoning and land-use restrictions.

HUD had no immediate comment, but Martin E. Sloane, an attorney for the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing, said the impact of the decision would depend largely upon HUD.

"It's a really encouraging decision and may be a breakthrough," Sloane said. "If HUD reacts affirmatively a lot can happen. But if HUD reacts by dragging its feet, HUD may very well nullify the decision."

In another case, which the court will hear next fall, Chicago blacks challenged the refusal of suburban Arlington Heights to rezone to permit such a project.

Carter Says Ruling May Leave Room For Local Desegregation In Housing

Pittsburgh (UPI) — Jimmy Carter said Tuesday the new Supreme Court ruling against segregated public housing seems to leave room for local governments to remedy the problem themselves.

He said he agrees with the court that it is "illegal" for local officials and the Department of Housing and Urban Development to conspire at keeping public housing confined to ghetto areas and out of the suburbs.

"It seems to leave substantial responsibility to the local authorities," the Democratic presidential candidate said. He was commenting on Tuesday's high court decision.

". . . It doesn't mean you have to have low-income housing in the suburbs. You can, and there is flexibility. It would jointly be worked out with the local housing administration, city government and HUD.

"When there is a definite pattern brought on by collusion between HUD and a city to exclude low income housing from broad regions — that's illegal. It's illegal under the 1974 housing act."

The Supreme Court ruled without dissent Tuesday that, if minorities can prove HUD cooperated with local officials to limit public housing to ghetto neighborhoods, a court may force HUD to fund low-income housing in the suburbs.

Asked for comment on the decision, Carter said he felt "on shaky ground trying to explain a ruling I haven't read," and quipped:

"I've become an expert on housing and ethnic neighborhoods these last few weeks."

Hercules Did It First

©The New York Times

Washington — Flushing a barn with water to wash away cow manure is a system dating back to Hercules, the Supreme Court noted Tuesday, and thus cannot be patented.

The court, in a unanimous ruling, reversed a court of appeals order that had upheld a patent-infringement suit by Ag Pro Inc., which patented its system of tanks, pipes and gutters in 1965.

But Justice William R. Brennan, who wrote the court's opinion, said: "Systems using water to clear animal wastes from barn floors have been familiar on dairy farms since ancient times."

Quoting from a book on Greek mythology, he cited the saga of the fifth labor of Hercules, which was to clean the stables of Aneas, king of Elis. Hercules, it is said, dammed and diverted the waters of a river to wash out the stables. Thus there was nothing new or "nonobvious" in the notion, Brennan said.

Carter Comments On Proposals To Break Up Big Oil Companies

By The Associated Press

Democratic presidential hopeful Jimmy Carter said Tuesday that any proposals to break up major oil companies should be considered carefully and included in a long-range program for development of the nation's energy policies.

The former Georgia governor told campaign workers at Houston he is concerned about two areas of competition within the petroleum industry.

"I think I'm the only Democratic candidate who hasn't called for divestiture of the oil companies. But I am concerned about adequate competition at the retail level and competition as to ownership by oil companies of coal interests," he said.

Carter said those were the only areas that concern him about proposals before Congress to limit oil company participation to one or more segments of the petroleum industry or prohibit their activity in other energy fields.

"If I could be convinced of adequate competition in those two areas it would ease my mind," he said.

He added that any action on divestiture should be compatible with long-range energy plans after adequate study and debate.

Among the other candidates, Sen. Henry Jackson campaigned in Connecticut, predicted that he would gain a majority of the delegates at stake in the Pennsylvania primary. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, was in Portland, Ore., and Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona was in Albuquerque, N.M.

Carter said in Houston that voter response to his campaign thus far looks "very good for us."

But he added, "I need your help, financially, immediately." Monday, he thanked campaign workers in Atlanta for the money they had gathered, but said more was needed to pay for a media campaign for the Pennsylvania primary.

Carter and other presidential primary candidates turned in another $1 million worth of campaign money requests this week to the Federal Election Commission, bringing to $2.37 million the total requests submitted since the flow of federal matching money was shut off by a Supreme Court ruling.

Even when Congress returns from the Easter recess and works out final details of legislation that would restart the flow, the question remains whether President Ford will sign the bill.

Ford would be the biggest beneficiary of a renewed flow of federal matching money. His campaign has requested $909,979.99. The next-highest request is for $436,134.18 from Ford's challenger, Ronald Reagan.

The last matching fund payments were made March 22, the expiration date for the FEC's power to certify the money. Since then, most candidates have increasingly complained about financial pains caused by the cutoff of anticipated funds.

In other political campaign developments:

— The FBI said Tuesday the Justice Department had ordered an investigation into the disappearance of 35 signatures from Rep. Morris K. Udall's petitions for the May 4 Indiana primary Agents said the investigation was ordered after a preliminary probe revealed possible federal election law violations.

Indiana Secretary of State Larry Conrad ruled Udall off the state's primary ballot when the signature shortage was discovered. The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday refused to schedule a special hearing to rule on the case, ensuring that Udall will not be on the May 4 ballot.

— In Boston, a consulting firm said it had parted ways with Udall's campaign after disagreement over how much money to spend on the campaign.

— Church told an Oregon State University audience at Corvallis that education must be given more stature in federal bureaucracy.

"No wonder we are confronted with statistics on little Johnny's poo abilities in reading and arithmetic," he said.

6,720 Eggs In Omelette

Kruishoutem, Belgium (UPI) — One cannot make an omelette without breaking an egg and six leading Flanders chefs broke 6,720 to claim a new world omelette record.

Apart from the eggs — 1,219 more than the previous omelette record set by the town of Oostduinkerke last September — the final product, which fried for two hours and 13 minutes in a frying pan with a diameter of 16 feet, 5 inches, contained almost eight gallons of oil, 7¾ pounds of salt and 1⅛ pounds of pepper

The omelette making was the highlight of the traditional open air Easter fete in this town

Carter Says Ruling May Leave Room For Local Desegregation In Housing

Pittsburgh (UPI) — Jimmy Carter said Tuesday the new Supreme Court ruling against segregated public housing seems to leave room for local governments to remedy the problem themselves.

He said he agrees with the court that it is "illegal" for local officials and the Department of Housing and Urban Development to conspire at keeping public housing confined to ghetto areas and out of the suburbs.

"It seems to leave substantial responsibility to the local authorities," the Democratic presidential candidate said. He was commenting on Tuesday's high court decision.

"...It doesn't mean you have to have low-income housing in the suburbs. You can, and there is flexibility. It would jointly be worked out with the local housing administration, city government and HUD.

"When there is a definite pattern brought on by collusion between HUD and a city to exclude low income housing from broad regions — that's illegal. It's illegal under the 1974 housing act."

The Supreme Court ruled without dissent Tuesday that, if minorities can prove HUD cooperated with local officials to limit public housing to ghetto neighborhoods, a court may force HUD to fund low-income housing in the suburbs.

Asked for comment on the decision, Carter said he felt "on shaky ground trying to explain a ruling I haven't read," and quipped:

"I've become an expert on housing and ethnic neighborhoods these last few weeks."

Hercules Did It First

©The New York Times

Washington — Flushing a barn with water to wash away cow manure is a system dating back to Hercules, the Supreme Court noted Tuesday, and thus cannot be patented.

The court, in a unanimous ruling, reversed a court of appeals order that had upheld a patent-infringement suit by Ag Pro Inc., which patented its system of tanks, pipes and gutters in 1965.

But Justice William R. Brennan, who wrote the court's opinion, said: "Systems using water to clear animal wastes from barn floors have been familiar on dairy farms since ancient times."

Quoting from a book on Greek mythology, he cited the saga of the fifth labor of Hercules, which was to clean the stables of Aneas, king of Elis. Hercules, it is said, dammed and diverted the waters of a river to wash out the stables. Thus there was nothing new or "nonobvious" in the notion, Brennan said.

Carter Comments On Proposals To Break Up Big Oil Companies

By The Associated Press

Democratic presidential hopeful Jimmy Carter said Tuesday that any proposals to break up major oil companies should be considered carefully and included in a long-range program for development of the nation's energy policies.

The former Georgia governor told campaign workers at Houston he is concerned about two areas of competition within the petroleum industry.

"I think I'm the only Democratic candidate who hasn't called for divestiture of the oil companies. But I am concerned about adequate competition at the retail level and competition as to ownership by oil companies of coal interests," he said.

Carter said those were the only areas that concern him about proposals before Congress to limit oil company participation to one or more segments of the petroleum industry or prohibit their activity in other energy fields.

"If I could be convinced of adequate competition in those two areas it would ease my mind," he said.

He added that any action on divestiture should be compatible with long-range energy plans after adequate study and debate.

Among the other candidates, Sen. Henry Jackson campaigned in Connecticut, predicted that he would gain a majority of the delegates at stake in the Pennsylvania primary. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, was in Portland, Ore., and Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona was in Albuquerque, N.M.

Carter said in Houston that voter response to his campaign thus far looks "very good for us."

But he added, "I need your help, financially, immediately." Monday, he thanked campaign workers in Atlanta for the money they had gathered, but said more was needed to pay for a media campaign for the Pennsylvania primary.

Carter and other presidential primary candidates turned in another $1 million worth of campaign money requests this week to the Federal Election Commission, bringing to $2.37 million the total requests submitted since the flow of federal matching money was shut off by a Supreme Court ruling.

Even when Congress returns from the Easter recess and works out final details of legislation that would restart the flow, the question remains whether President Ford will sign the bill.

Ford would be the biggest beneficiary of a renewed flow of federal matching money. His campaign has requested $909,979.99. The next-highest request is for $436,134.18 from Ford's challenger, Ronald Reagan.

The last matching fund payments were made March 22, the expiration date for the FEC's power to certify the money. Since then, most candidates have increasingly complained about financial pains caused by the cutoff of anticipated funds.

In other political campaign developments:

— The FBI said Tuesday the Justice Department had ordered an investigation into the disappearance of 35 signatures from Rep. Morris K. Udall's petitions for the May 4 Indiana primary. Agents said the investigation was ordered after a preliminary probe revealed possible federal election law violations.

Indiana Secretary of State Larry Conrad ruled Udall off the state's primary ballot when the signature shortage was discovered. The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday refused to schedule a special hearing to rule on the case, ensuring that Udall will not be on the May 4 ballot.

— In Boston, a consulting firm said it had parted ways with Udall's campaign after disagreement over how much money to spend on the campaign.

— Church told an Oregon State University audience at Corvallis that education must be given more stature in federal bureaucracy.

"No wonder we are confronted with statistics on little Johnny's poor abilities in reading and arithmetic," he said.

6,720 Eggs In Omelette

Kruishoutem, Belgium (UPI) — One cannot make an omelette without breaking an egg and six leading Flanders chefs broke 6,720 to claim a new world omelette record.

Apart from the eggs — 1,219 more than the previous omelette record set by the town of Oostduinkerke last September — the final product, which fried for two hours and 13 minutes in a frying pan with a diameter of 16 feet, 5 inches, contained almost eight gallons of oil, 7¾ pounds of salt and 1⅛ pounds of pepper.

The omelette making was the highlight of the traditional open air Easter fete in this town.

State Resumes Refunds

By The Associated Press

Tax Commissioner William E. Peters said Tuesday the state is resuming the payout of income tax refunds and will make its April school aid payment just four days late.

A low general fund balance and other factors delayed refund checks after March 22, according to Peters, and a $5.5 million school aid distribution was expected to be held up until the end of April.

Peters indicated the resumption of refund payments and the earlier-than-anticipated payout of the delayed state aid money were due to an improvement in the state's cash flow situation.

He said "all income tax receipts would be deposited no later than Friday," making that statement through a news release, but he acknowledged that some receipts delayed by taxpayers who sought deadline extensions would come in later.

"Over the weekend," Peters said, "we plan to release 45,000 refunds.

"Everyone who filed early and correctly should now have received their refunds."

Council Bluffs Lounge Is Sued

Council Bluffs (UPI) — An Omaha man, his wife and another woman have filed a $500,000 suit against a Council Bluffs lounge and one of its employes, court records showed Tuesday.

Listed as defendants in all three suits filed in Pottawattamie County District Court were Pete Bonacci and the BB&B Corp., which does business as the Joker Lounge in Council Bluffs.

Plaintiff Gary Moore of Omaha, a tow truck driver, alleged in the suit that Bonacci "did maliciously assault and strike the plaintiff in the face with his fists, causing personal injury and shattered glasses and permanent facial injuries."

He seeks $100,000 in actual and $200,000 punitive and exemplary damages.

Moore's wife Carol seeks $10,000 for the trauma of the event and $100,000 for the lost aid and companionship of her husband.

Another woman, Karen Matkins, alleges in her portion of the suit that her husband also was kicked and beaten up and also names William Nielson as a defendant. She seeks the same damages as does Mrs. Moore.

Court records show the suit stems from an incident in the parking lot of the lounge last June 29.

Beermann Wants More Figures Before Tax Decision

By United Press International

Secretary of State Allen Beermann, disputing the Exon administration's determination that taxes need not be raised this year, said Tuesday he is not ready for Wednesday's State Board of Equalization tax rate review session and may seek a delay on any action.

The board is required by state law to meet within 15 days of adjournment of a regular session of the Unicameral to determine if any adjustments are needed in state sales and income tax rates due to appropriations made by the Legislature.

Beermann said he would ask the attorney general if the board could meet Wednesday and then recess for a time so that more information, particularly on income tax revenue, can be obtained.

The secretary of state, one of five board members, said he is especially concerned about state treasury cash flow. A problem with cash flow last November prompted a special session of the Unicameral.

Beermann said if he understands the figures he received from State Tax Commissioner William Peters Monday, an increase in the sales tax rate for possibly half the year may be in order.

The sales tax rate is not at 2.5%. The income tax rate is at 15% of federal tax liability and Peters said it can't be raised without automatically triggering an increase in the sales tax rate due to a provision which requires sales and income tax revenue liabilities to be about equal.

Based on current revenue projections, there is still some flexibility in the sales tax rate in applying the approximately equal test but not in the income tax rate.

Beermann said in his opinion "the big factor" in determining whether a sales tax rate increase is needed to keep the treasury balance in the black is the final tally of income taxes as of the April 15 filing deadline.

He also said he was thinking mostly of sales taxes because that rate can change from month to month while an income tax change must cover the entire calendar year.

The tax commissioner's projections indicated the treasury balance as of June 30, the end of the current fiscal year, would range from $3.2 million to $12.2 million, depending on whether all of the appropriations made by the Unicameral are spent.

Autopsy Not Certain On Lentz's Wounds

Denver (AP) — An autopsy report on airplane hijacker Roger Lyle Lentz showed he died from massive internal injuries caused by at least five gunshot wounds, Denver police said Tuesday.

FBI agents shot Lentz, of Marquette, Neb., with .38-caliber handguns early Monday inside the jetliner provided ostensibly to take him to Mexico.

His death ended a seven-hour drama in which he forced a pilot to fly him in a private plane from Grand Island to Denver, then negotiated with authorities for the larger aircraft.

Denver homicide detectives Tom Lohr and John Weber said pathologists still were trying on Tuesday to determine how many bullets entered Lentz's body.

They said his body contained eight entrance and exit wounds but that some were caused by bullets going through the body and re-entering it. Ted Rosack, special agent in charge of the Denver FBI office, said he believed five shots hit the man.

Denver police and the FBI said most of the shots struck Lentz in the abdomen and stomach, although Rosack said one bullet hit him in the hand in which he held a .22-caliber pistol on Robert Blair, the pilot of the small plane. The bullet shattered the pistol butt, Rosack said.

Neither Blair nor Lentz's other hostage, airplane mechanic Harlan Hillers, was injured during the episode.

The Denver detectives said Lentz entered the Convair 990 jetliner holding a shotgun to the head of Hillers, but Hillers was pushed aside by an FBI agent.

More Funds Released For College

Scottsbluff (AP) — Four more counties have released tax funds for the Western Nebraska Technical Community College Area, leaving only two still withholding funds. Morrill, Deuel, Garden and Cherry counties voluntarily turned over property tax money collected for the college area. Kimball and Banner counties remain as the only holdouts in the 13-county area. Area counties argued that the law by which property taxes are levied for technical community colleges is unconstitutional.

Edwards Ordered Back To Iowa

North Platte (AP) — A Des Moines, Iowa, massage parlor operator, Larry Edwards, has been ordered returned to Iowa where he is wanted on perjury charges in connection with a civil case filed by Iowa Attorney General Richard Turner. The decision was announced by Lincoln County District Court Judge Keith Windrum, who upheld a lower court order. However, Windrum suspended his ruling to give Edwards 10 days to appeal the decision to the Nebraska Supreme Court.

Flames Fail To Close Plant

Kearney (AP) — A fire which caused an estimated $75,000 to $100,000 in damage Sunday failed to halt the operations of the Eaton Corp. plant just east of here, officials said. It took firemen about two hours to control the smokey blaze, which was confined to a large oil vat adjacent to a heat treatment machine for auto poppet valves which are manufactured at the plant. Eaton officials said the plant operated at nearly 100% Monday.

Couple Donating Alma Public Library

ALMA'S CARNEGIE LIBRARY . . . dates back to 1911.

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Alma — Partly because "there were so few educational privileges when I was a kid," a Lincoln man and his wife are donating a new public library to this Harlan County community.

The new building, planned for construction next year, will be a memorial to the parents of onetime hardwareman Albert Hoesch. It will replace a 1911 Carnegie library.

"There was no library for the older children in our family," reflected the semi-retired donor, who lives at 224 S. Cotner Blvd. "And since we didn't have a car to drive to town, I didn't get to use the library when it was built."

Hoesch's parents, Karl and Katherine, emigrated from Germany in 1886 and homesteaded six miles east of Huntley. The four youngest of their 10 children, Albert among them, became college graduates.

Albert himself graduated from North Central College and Academy at Naperville, Ill., then studied sociology at the University of Nebraska. He became a contractor, then spent 22 years in the hardware business in Lincoln.

"My folks went through so much, living in a sod house and experiencing so many hardships," he said. "In their memory, I'm hoping for a building with considerable character, a real drawing card perhaps for the city of Alma."

Roger Schluntz of the NU architectural department and a nephew of Hoesch is designing the structure. No estimate of cost is yet available.

According to Alma librarian Mrs. Genevieve Dugan, the April 1 announcement of the gift "came as a complete surprise to me." The exact site for the building is still to be determined.

Sharing in her husband's enthusiasm for the project, Mrs. Hoesch also has more than the usual regard for education. Holding a bachelor's degree from Nebraska Wesleyan University and a master's from NU, she was a Lincoln teacher for 11 years and principal of Pyrtle elementary school for nine.

The couple still has farming interests in Harlan County.

DONORS . . . Lincolnites Mr. and Mrs. Hoesch.

Legion Hall At Alliance Burns Down

Alliance (AP) — The American Legion Hall in downtown Alliance was burned to the ground and a bar and two offices in the structure were destroyed early Tuesday.

The one-story brick and frame structure contained the Legion meeting hall, a bar and the offices of the Box Butte County Veterans Services and that of the Alliance Credit Union.

Fire Chief L. E. Overstreet said the cause of the blaze had not been determined, but a deputy state fire marshal was investigating. There was no estimate of the loss.

A laundry and dry cleaning establishment next door suffered some smoke damage, Overstreet said, but other buildings nearby escaped damage.

The fire was discovered late Monday night and contained early Tuesday.

Overstreet said three pumper trucks at the scene poured 3,000 gallons of water a minute on the fire at its peak. He said no one was in the building when the blaze was discovered.

Volunteer firemen from Hemingford assisted Alliance volunteers in battling the blaze.

Three More Suits Filed In Pathfinder Hotel Blast

Fremont (AP) — Three more lawsuits stemming from the Jan. 10 explosion at the Pathfinder Hotel have been filed in Dodge County District Court.

Eighteen persons were killed outright in the explosion and fire which destroyed the old hotel, and two other women died several weeks after the blast.

The most recently filed suits seek damages in the names of three women: Mrs. Eunice Sexton and Mrs. Muriel Swearingen, both who died in the explosion, and Mrs. Mildred Hackney, who died March 6.

Mrs. Hackney, 69, who lived in the hotel, died of a "massive pulmonary embolism" (blood clot) which was attributed to recurring "thrombophlebitis," according to her death certificate.

The physician signing the certificate, A. J. Merrick of Fremont, listed a broken leg suffered in the explision as a causal factor, but no autopsy was conducted and Dodge County Coronoer and Atty. F. A. Gossett III has not listed Mrs. Hackney as a Pathfinder death victim.

Mrs. Sexton and Mrs. Swearingen were attending a meeting in the hotel at the time of the explosion.

The suits ask for a more than $12,000 in specific damages for things such as funeral expenses, and in the case of Mrs. Hackney, medical expenses and property loss.

In addition, the suits ask undetermined compensation for such things as loss by victims' families, loss of companionship, comfort and care and loss of income, along with many others.

A preliminary report from the National Transportation Safety Board has indicated that the explosion was caused by a natural gas leak. The leak apparently developed when the plastic gas main contracted and pulled away from a coupling.

Named as defendants in the suits are the Nebraska Natural Gas Co., which is Fremont's natural gas supplier, and E. I. DuPont de Nemours, Inc., which manufactured the plastic pipe.

The suits were filed by the victims' survivors: John W. Swearingin, husband and executor of Mrs. Swearingen's estate; Lloyd Sexton, husband and executor of Mrs. Sexton's estate, and Helen Klintworth, daughter of and the administrator of Mrs. Hackney's estate.

Painting Damage Trial Put Off

Omaha (AP) — An Omaha man accused of damaging a valuable painting earlier this year has been declared mentally ill to such a degree that he cannot now stand trial.

Charged in the Jan. 12 incident at the Joslyn Art Museum was Fred H. Fennelly.

Fennelly, 37, allegedly tossed a 50-pound metal statue at the painting, "Return of Spring," by French artist William Adolphe Bourguereau.

Fennelly reportedly told police the painting of nude cherubs gathered around a nude female was "filthy."

Douglas County District Court Judge Theodore Richling held a hearing on Fennelly's mental condition two weeks ago. During the hearing, three local psychologists said Fennelly is suffering from a grave mental illness.

Richling ordered Fennelly confined at the Norfolk Regional Center until psychiatrists determine he is competent to stand trial.

Richling ruled that Fennelly's mental condition prevents him from fully understanding the nature of the charges against him and from assisting in his own defense.

Food An Unlikely Weapon—Driscoll

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Food is not likely to be used as a weapon by the U.S. Department of State according to Robert S. Driscoll, chief of Chilean Political Affairs, Bureau of Inter-American Affairs, U.S. Department of State.

Driscoll is in Nebraska on an exchange program with the University as he reacquaints himself with the U.S. after spending several years overseas.

"I really don't see a supply of food as much of a club in world affairs in the American political context," Driscoll said.

Never Starve

"The American people are not terribly fond of the Russians but they would never allow a million Russians to starve to death if we had the food to supply them," he said.

Driscoll agreed that food shipments to nations are often used as a political tool but pointed to shipments made to India while the U.S. had strained relations with them as an example of feeding a nation that had major differences with us.

Driscoll said that Chile was capable of feeding itself but their government had adopted a policy of subsidizing the consumer at the expense of the farmer.

"They have a tremendously rich agricultural area that can produce a lot of food but the farmers don't have the economic incentive to expand food production," he said.

Driscoll noted that this problem existed in many nations. "The urban populations have at least 50% of the world's people. This is where the governments are and it is from these people that political power comes," he said.

"In a nation that has a very poor standard of living, a $2.00 rise in the cost of living is a political disaster. They can't afford to let food prices rise. They won't survive politically," he said.

"The U.S. is a source of food for much of the world but it is also a source of food technology. The American farmer is a success and the whole world knows it," he said.

Chile imports a lot of wheat from the United States. "This is important to Nebraska wheat growers as a market for their bread wheats," he said.

Driscoll said current allocations of wheat for Chile would exceed $46 million this fiscal year. "Most of this wheat has already been purchased," he said.

Rain Hampering Beet Planting In Panhandle

Scottsbluff (AP) — Already behind schedule because of the recent contract dispute with the Great Western Sugar Co., Panhandle sugar beet farmers are now trying to make up the lost ground.

However, general rains over the area last Friday and over the weekend hampered planting efforts, according to Donald Redman, Nebraska area agriculture manager for Great Western.

Redmen said 14,000 acres of the 65,000 acres to be planted to beets this year were planted when the rains hit last Friday.

Redman estimated that the plantings will be finished within another 10 days if the weather holds.

Even though the rain has delayed some of the planting, Redman said the moisture will help the seeds germinate faster.

Skies were clear over the area Tuesday, but the National Weather Service was predicting a chance of scattered showers through Friday.

State Pastures Said In Worst Shape Since '34

Nebraska pastures and rangeland are in the worst shape since 1934, according to Wally Moline, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension forage specialist.

This is a result of dry weather and overgrazing, he said.

Even with normal rainfall, it would take two years of good management to get the grass back to where it should be, he said.

In the meantime, he suggests supplementing the pastures with seedings of alfalfa, small grains, sudangrass, or millet.

The next move from an annual forage, such as sudangrass, should be to alfalfa, he said.

As the UNL computer program keeps coming out with alfalfa as the best source of protein in feeding rations, farmers are recognizing the tremendous value of the crop, he said.

Consequently, there will be a considerable increase in seedings, especially as new irrigated acres are added, Moline said.

Alfalfa can be established under irrigation as late as June, he said.

Indicative of the interest in the crop is the number of inquiries he has been getting about varieties to plant, he said.

"This is important, since there can be a 20% difference in yields between two varieties," he said.

"The best bet for a Nebraska farmer is to check with his county agent. Each has been provided with a list of varieties and their yields to test around the state. The farmer can check the list and decide for himself which variety would be best. But whatever the variety choice is, insist on certified seed," he said.

Another direction a farmer can go is more intensive production of ensilage, he said.

The tonnage of ensilage harvested in Nebraska has doubled every three years for the past 10 years and is now up to 8 million tons per year of corn and sorghum silage, he said.

Harvesting of haylage is also on the increase because it enables farmers and ranchers to get maximum yield and quality, he said.

Five Soviets Visit UNL, Seek Help On Tractors

Five Soviet agriculture officials are looking to the University of Nebraska tractor testing laboratory for help in solving the USSR's tractor maintenance and supply problems.

A visit to Lincoln was part of their three-week itinerary which included stops at the major agriculture machinery manufacturers of the United States.

Dr. Louis Leviticus, chief engineer of the laboratory, said the Russians asked about a national repair policy that would help them better coordinate tractor maintenance and were told the free enterprise system regulates supply and quality through competition.

Plans are not firm, Leviticus said, but the laboratory may receive two Russian tractors of 340 and 150 horsepower for testing next year.

Smith Bill Could End Platte River Dispute

North Platte (AP) — Should Congress act following its Easter recess, the long-raging controversy over the Platte River could be ended.

The suggestion that the corps take over the river was originally suggested by the Environmental Protection Agency, on the grounds that the river meets the historical definition of being navigable.

Under the definition, a river or stream only had to be used by a fur trader or for some other commercial use sometime in history to come under the navigable term. Waterways classified as such could then be taken over by the corps.

The suggestion that the Platte be taken over drew fire from many points within the state, especially interests along and near the river.

Speaking here Tuesday, Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., said a bill taking away the corps' authority for imposition of dredge and fill regulations along the Platte will come up for vote in the House after the current recess.

"This bill, which has been reported out of the House Public Works Committee, contains the exact wording of the bill I introduced redefining navigability," said Mrs. Smith.

She said the definition would limit the corps' authority to only those waterways which are presently used or could be used for interstate transportation in their natural conditions.

She explained the bill would prevent the corps from imposing the regulations on the Platte itself, and its tributaries.

If the bill is passed, Mrs. Smith said the corps will retain authority only over bridges, dams or other structures placed across or in the river.

Old West Commission Extends Aid Program

Cheyenne, Wyo. (UPI) — The Old West Regional Commission Tuesday approved a two-year extension for a program to assist communities straining with growth caused by industrial impact.

The amount to be appropriated for the program will be decided by alternates for the five governors before the next commission meeting June 15.

Warren C. Wood, a federally appointed commission co-chairman, said the project provides architects, engineers and other technicians to assist communities with their impact problems.

The commission also approved a motion to grant an additional year's funding to the Western Governors' Regional Energy Policy Office. The energy office has requested $165,000.

Wood said the commission would approve at least as much as the $160,000 granted to the office last year, but action will not be taken until the next commission meeting.

In other action, Montana got an additional $118,000 in funding to extend an investigation of industrial impact on the middle and lower Yellowstone River basins through a second complete growing season.

The investigation is being conducted by the Montana Department of Natural Resources and Conservation. The governors approved the action taken by their alternates at a meeting March 25 in Sioux Falls, S.D.

The Nebraska alternate had opposed the motion at the previous meeting, but Gov. J. James Exon voted in favor of the proposal Tuesday.

Attending the Cheyenne meeting, along with Exon, were Govs. Ed Herschler of Wyoming, Arthur Link of North Dakota and Gov. Richard Kneip of South Dakota. Gov. Thomas Judge of Montana was unable to attend because of state business.

The commission also approved allocation of $125,000 in state investment planning funds for July 1-September 30. The amount is the same appropriated last year.

Another project given approval grants an additional $20,000 in personal services and travel expenses for commission excess property consultants. The funds would provide services to the states through June, 1977.

Oil Director Expecting Exploration To Decline

Sidney (UPI) — The director of the Nebraska Oil and Gas Commission said Tuesday he expects a slight decline in overall petroleum exploration activity in the state this year.

Paul Roberts of Sidney said the primary reason is the change in price controls which went into effect Feb. 1. Those controls, he said, dropped the price of crude from $14 a barrel down to a current top of $11.25 on new wells.

"Old oil," or oil from wells in operation prior to September of 1973, has a frozen price of $5.25 a barrel.

The commission director said about 35% of the wells in the state qualify for the $11.25 a barrel top price.

As to where activity is expected this year, Roberts said it would be in Hitchcock and Dundee Counties.

Nebraska ended 1975 with 1,190 active wells and 437 inactive. At the end of 1974 there were 1,127 active and 467 inactive wells. The previous year saw 1,107 active and 550 inactive wells.

Roberts said last year 377 drilling permits were issued. He said he expects this year's total to be in the neighborhood of 350 permits.

The director also said it appears the industry has rebounded from the equipment and materials shortage of a year ago. However, he said cost of well supplies has doubled and in some areas tripled.

That means, Roberts said, "The guy with a less than 20-barrel a day well may be in trouble." He said the average well in Nebraska pumps between 25 and 30 barrels a day.

Clothing Spending Rises $19 in 1975

Washington (UPI) — Americans spent $19 more per person for clothing and shoes last year than the $369 they spent in 1974. Consumer research specialists of the USDA Agricultural Research Service say higher prices rather than increased buying accounted for about three-fifths of the increase.

Food An Unlikely Weapon—Driscoll

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Food is not likely to be used as a weapon by the U.S. Department of State according to Robert S Driscoll, chief of Chilean Political Affairs, Bureau of Inter-American Affairs, U.S. Department of State.

Driscoll is in Nebraska on an exchange program with the University as he reacquaints himself with the U.S. after spending several years overseas.

"I really don't see a supply of food as much of a club in world affairs in the American political context," Driscoll said.

Never Starve

"The American people are not terribly fond of the Russians but they would never allow a million Russians to starve to death if we had the food to supply them," he said

Driscoll agreed that food shipments to nations are often used as a political tool but pointed to shipments made to India while the U.S. had strained relations with them as an example of feeding a nation that had major differences with us.

Driscoll said that Chile was capable of feeding itself but their government had adopted a policy of subsidizing the consumer at the expense of the farmer.

"They have a tremendously rich agricultural area that can produce a lot of food but the farmers don't have the economic incentive to expand food production," he said

Driscoll noted that this problem existed in many nations. "The urban populations have at least 50% of the world's people. This is where the governments are and it is from these people that political power comes," he said.

"In a nation that has a very poor standard of living, a $2.00 rise in the cost of living is a political disaster. They can't afford to let food prices rise. They won't survive politically," he said.

"The U.S is a source of food for much of the world but it is also a source of food technology The American farmer is a success and the whole world knows it," he said.

Chile imports a lot of wheat from the United States. "This is important to Nebraska wheat growers as a market for their bread wheats," he said

Driscoll said current allocations of wheat for Chile would exceed $46 million this fiscal year "Most of this wheat has already been purchased," he said.

Rain Hampering Beet Planting In Panhandle

Scottsbluff (AP) — Already behind schedule because of the recent contract dispute with the Great Western Sugar Co., Panhandle sugar beet farmers are now trying to make up the lost ground

However, general rains over the area last Friday and over the weekend hampered planting efforts, according to Donald Redman, Nebraska area agriculture manager for Great Western.

Redmen said 14,000 acres of the 65,000 acres to be planted to beets this year were planted when the rains hit last Friday

Redman estimated that the plantings will be finished within another 10 days if the weather holds.

Even though the rain has delayed some of the planting, Redman said the moisture will help the seeds germinate faster.

Skies were clear over the area Tuesday, but the National Weather Service was predicting a chance of scattered showers through Friday

State Pastures Said In Worst Shape Since '34

Nebraska pastures and rangeland are in the worst shape since 1934, according to Wally Moline, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension forage specialist.

This is a result of dry weather and overgrazing, he said.

Even with normal rainfall, it would take two years of good management to get the grass back to where it should be, he said.

In the meantime, he suggests supplementing the pastures with seedings of alfalfa, small grains, sudangrass, or millet.

The next move from an annual forage, such as sudangrass, should be to alfalfa, he said.

As the UNL computer program keeps coming out with alfalfa as the best source of protein in feeding rations, farmers are recognizing the tremendous value of the crop, he said.

Consequently, there will be a considerable increase in seedings, especially as new irrigated acres are added, Moline said.

Alfalfa can be established under irrigation as late as June, he said.

Indicative of the interest in the crop is the number of inquiries he has been getting about varieties to plant, he said.

"This is important, since there can be a 20% difference in yields between two varieties," he said.

"The best bet for a Nebraska farmer is to check with his county agent. Each has been provided with a list of varieties and their yields to test around the state. The farmer can check the list and decide for himself which variety would be best But whatever the variety choice is, insist on certified seed," he said.

Another direction a farmer can go is more intensive production of ensilage, he said.

The tonnage of ensilage harvested in Nebraska has doubled every three years for the past 10 years and is now up to 8 million tons per year of corn and sorghum silage, he said.

Harvesting of haylage is also on the increase because it enables farmers and ranchers to get maximum yield and quality, he said.

Spring is Green

I tend to associate spring with fresh green vegetables. Today a wide assortment of lettuce and greens are available in the supermarket the year round.

All of the leafy green vegetables provide a rich source of vitamin A to the diet. The darker green leaves are higher in this vitamin than the inside white or light green leaves. These leafy greens also contain high levels of vitamin C, vitamin K, and folic acid, an essential B vitamin. No other group of vegetables provides this quantity of vitamins.

The leafy green vegetables are low in fat, carbohydrate, and protein, thus they are low in calories. For those individuals on low calorie diets, the green leafy vegetables can be eaten in large amounts to provide a feeling of fullness.

A variety of greens can be tossed into a delightful salad or the spring salad can be prepared from one type of highly nutritious leafy green.

A fresh spinach salad is a beautiful, delicious, nutritious dish.

Fresh Spinach Salad
1 lb. fresh spinach leaves
1 cup fresh mushrooms
4 strips bacon
6 Tbls. French dressing
¼ tsp. dry mustard

Drugs 'Still Big Business' In Nebraska

By J. L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

The Nebraska State Patrol made 6% fewer drug arrests in 1975 than in 1974.

But, according to Lt. Bob Clinkenbeard, head of the patrol's division of drug control in Lincoln, that figure doesn't indicate a decline in the amount of drug traffic in the state. "It's still big business," he said.

Lincoln in particular, and Nebraska in general, are often mentioned — in street talk and rumor, at least — as being logical hubs for drug traffic, Clinkenbeard said.

"It's a known fact that there are people in this state who use illegal drugs to make a living. The exact numbers are questionable, but it is here," he said.

Oldest Was 73

The patrol arrested 1,728 persons for drug offenses in 1975 compared with 1,836 in 1974. Of the arrests, 1,497 or 86% were male, 237 or 14% were female. The youngest person arrested was 13, the oldest was 73.

"Yes, 73," Clinkenbeard grinned. That old-timer was joined by people who were 64, 45, 44, 43 and 40. The median age, however, was 20, a year younger than it used to be, he added.

Of the total number arrested, 90% were 26 or under. A third were non-Nebraskans, with the largest number (71) of the 569 out-of-staters arrested coming from Colorado.

Lancaster County was the most productive ground for the patrol: 137 persons were nabbed here for drug offenses. Douglas County was second with 132 and Hall County was third with 131 arrests. At least one arrest was made in each of the 93 counties, Clinkenbeard added.

"You can, unfortunately, read almost anything into statistics," Clinkenbeard said. "They don't tell the real story about our efforts."

One reason for the fewer arrests might be that the patrol is "putting more quality into their cases," he explained.

"We've got to go back up the distribution chain as high as we can and shut off the supply. Sometimes we are stopped by state lines, but our cooperation with other agencies has been good," he said.

National Coordination

The federal Drug Enforcement Administration, an outgrowth of the old Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, often aids in coordinating the nationwide efforts, he said.

Nebraska has had a drug control branch of the patrol since 1967. Clinkenbeard was in on the ground floor of that operation and worked in Scottsbluff before a transfer to Norfolk, and, eventually, Lincoln. He now directs the activities of 33 men in the field throughout the state.

The patrol has four attorneys and the use of state labs in Lincoln and Scottsbluff.

It offers a variety of services to schools, civic organizations and law enforcement agencies from educational programs on down to under cover work.

Undercover Man On Own

"The undercover cop is really on his own," Clinkenbeard said. "He can make it or break it just by his confidence or lack of confidence."

There are documented cases of an undercover officer, for example, selling drugs to a guy that he sent to prison a year ago, he added.

"Sometimes it's right there under your nose, and you have to sniff it out and work backwards," he said, adding that the patrol has to work under the guidelines of the courts and keep officer morale in mind in establishing policies.

He spoke with disgust about some pre-trial diversion programs which "sometimes do more harm than good." A local case involved a Nebraska Penal Complex inmate who was on work-release when he was arrested with one of the largest amounts of opium confiscated in the city for years, he said.

"We're finally reaching the national levels of drug abuse in Nebraska," he noted. "For years people around Nebraska have told us that we didn't really have things so bad," he explained, but "we're catching up."

All is not really that bleak. Seizures of drugs in the state have increased during the past year, Clinkenbeard said.

More Pills Seized

In 1974, officers seized some 77,000 stimulant tablets. By 1975 that number had increased to 321,000 tablets. The 1976 total is, already well over 100,000, he said.

Not all is undercover work, or luck. Troopers involved with traffic control account for more than one-third of the cases tried each year, Clinkenbeard said.

Most of these arrests come from routine traffic stops. "The mad scramble to hide something in the car is the real give away," he added.

Odor, misplaced paraphernalia and the general physical appearance of the suspects are often additional factors in the arrests.

Where do the drugs come from?

"Our major source seems to be California," Clinkenbeard said. "We used to get a lot of white crosses (a stimulant) from Canada, but the DEA pretty well dried that operation up," he added.

"Drugs is still a lucrative business, but, then again, so is law enforcement," Clinkenbeard observed.

Spring is Green

I tend to associate spring with fresh green vegetables Today a wide assortment of lettuce and greens are available in the supermarket the year round

All of the leafy green vegetables provide a rich source of vitamin A to the diet The darker green leaves are higher in this vitamin than the inside white or light green leaves. These leafy greens also contain high levels of vitamin C vitamin K and folic acid an essential B vitamin No other group of vegetables provides this quantity of vitamins

The leafy green vegetables are low in fat carbohydrate and protein thus they are low in calories For those individuals on low calorie diets, the green leafy vegetables can be eaten in large amounts to provide a feeling of fullness

A variety of greens can be tossed into a delightful salad or the spring salad can be prepared from one type of highly nutritious leafy green

Fresh Spinach Salad

1 lb fresh spinach leaves
1 cup fresh mushrooms
4 strips bacon
6 Tbls French dressing
¼ tsp dry mustard

Wash and tear the spinach leaves into bite size pieces Clean and slice mushrooms Add to spinach Saute bacon until crisp break into small pieces Heat French dressing add bacon and pour over spinach and mushroom salad just before serving Serves 4

LONG LIFE . . . but Mrs. Whitaker had to work hard.

102 Result Of Kindness

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Elizabeth Whitaker was in her late 20s at the birth of the Twentieth Century. She lived through two world wars and the Great Depression of the 1930s. She has witnessed the U.S. moon walk and the demoralizing Watergate scandal.

She doesn't know how she did it, but Mrs. Whitaker is 102 years and five months old.

"I didn't expect to live this long," she said. But she is still going strong, because, as she puts it, "you have to to get anywhere."

Mrs. Whitaker suspects, however, that her longevity is a result of hard work and kindness to those around her.

"You know what the Bible says — honor your parents and be good to your neighbor," she explained.

Mrs. Whitaker had to work hard while being good to her neighbors — for many years she was a midwife and has delivered more babies than she can remember.

"One thing I'm sorry about is that I never set (wrote) them all down," she said. But she recalls delivering nine children in one family and nearly as many with several other families.

According to Mrs. Whitaker, it was not unusual for her "to get up in the middle of the night and go when people couldn't get a doctor."

The hours were long and the pay was low. Besides the actual delivery, Mrs. Whitaker said, midwives were expected to take care of the rest of the family, the mother and the new baby.

"You were lucky if you got $4 a day," she said. "I remember getting only $1.50 a day and I took care of three children, the husband, the mother and the baby. Some places you would go and you wouldn't get nothing."

Unlike today when doctors and hospitals assume the responsibility of reporting births, Mrs. Whitaker said many years ago it was up to the parents to report to a local person charged with keeping such records — the school principal, minister or, if there was one, the county clerk.

And because many people felt it was no one's business when they had an addition to the family, births often went unreported, Mrs. Whitaker said.

"One couple didn't report the birth of their son, so when the son grew up they had trouble getting him into school," she added.

Overall, Mrs. Whitaker said, everyone worked hard to attain just the basic necessities of life during the early 1900s.

"If you would tell kids today how hard people had to get anything or how far they had to go just to get flour, they wouldn't believe it," she said. "I remember one woman who would put wheat in a cloth and beat it with a plank when she ran out of flour.

"We usually had flour, but we had to go from Columbus to Fremont to get it. Then they built flour mills 20 miles away from where we lived, so we took a load of wheat to the mills, had it ground and then came home."

Born Nov. 1, 1873, Mrs. Whitaker lived in a small town near Bremen, Germany, until she emigrated to the U.S. at the age of eight.

Mrs. Whitaker lived with relatives near Leigh until the family moved to Columbus. She resided in Columbus until two years ago, when she moved to Lincoln to live with her granddaughter, Mrs. Adolph Morlok.

During all her years in Nebraska, Mrs. Whitaker didn't attend school, except for two months at a school where the children were taught in German. "The old people wanted it that way," she explained.

She speaks English fluently, however, with no hint of her German background. "I learned to read and write by just picking it up from the newspaper," she said.

Mrs. Whitaker had four children — three sons and one daughter — and now counts six grandchildren, 25 great-grandchildren and 12 great-great-grandchildren.

And, quite frankly, the centenarian doesn't like "all the publicity." She has lived to be more than 102 but, as she puts it:

"What's that? People know what I've done, where I've lived."

Intelligence Linked To Family Size

New York (UPI) — New evidence indicates that intelligence depends not on race, class, genetics or income but rather on the number of children a family has, a published report said.

The report said the fewer children a family has the more likelihood there is for the children to possess higher IQs and that they are better off if the intervals between the births are stretched out.

The conclusions are based on a study conducted by Robert B. Zajonc, professor of psychology at the University of Michigan.

Zajonc and his collegue, Dr. Gregory Markus, suggested that the child's rate of mental development is influenced by the amount of adult knowledge available to him or her. They said a child's intellectual skills tend to grow more rapidly when parental knowledge is not shared by the presence of two or more children.

The study was evaluated in an article published in the April issue of Psychology Today.

The article, written by Dr. Carol Tavris, assistant managing editor of the magazine, said:

"The intellectual level of each additional child is diluted by his contact with young siblings, who have not reached full adult intelligence. A child who is the fifth of five grows up in a world influenced heavily by five child-sized minds. the first-born child, by contrast, grows up with his parents as primary forces, which gives him the maximum intellectual capacity."

The magazine article also said the decline in scholastic aptitude test scores of high school seniors will halt by 1980 and begin to climb again.

By 1980 the children born in the early 60's will be in high school and ready to take their SATs. The article said there will be proportionately more first and second born students.

Stepmother Wants To Get Married

DEAR ABBY: I know I've done wrong, but please help me because I'm in such a mess I don't know what to do.

I was 15 when my mother died, so my father and I "batched" it nearly two years. My father finally decided to marry Neva who was 37 and fairly nice-looking. Dad was 57.

Everything would have been fine if I had had any sense, but I started fooling around with Neva when my father was at work. Neva got pregnant. I was scared out of my wits, but Neva said she could make my father think the baby was his, so I shouldn't worry.

Neva had twin boys, and my father was the happiest man on earth. Everything was working out fine until the twins were 8-months-old. Then, with no warning, my father had a heart attack and died. Neva and I were in a state of shock for several days and didn't know what to do.

My father left enough insurance, cash and property for Neva and the twins to live comfortably and for me to go to college. Now Neva doesn't want me to go to college. She wants me to marry her — and help her raise the twins! She says they are as much mine as hers. I want to do what's right, but I don't want to live with Neva the rest of my life. Please help me.

TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: The twins could be your father's — and legally they are his sons, so don't feel duty-bound to marry Neva and sacrifice your college education to stay home and help raise the boys. Keep a respectable distance from Neva, and with alittle luck she'll find another man.

DEAR ABBY: Whenever I attend a double-ring ceremony, I wonder if the bride and groom realize that there is no justification whatsoever for a man's wearing a wedding ring.

The wedding ring is a symbol of bondage of females in marriage. It's the last relic of the collar and shackles with which captive and purchased brides were (and in some parts of the world still are) bound to their male masters.

I quote from an old German prayer book (1888):

"The wedding ring is for the bride only and is a symbol of her bondage, subjection to and obedience to her master; a sign that she is now no longer free and independent, but that she is bound and chained under the mastery of her husband."

HISTORY BUFF

DEAR BUFF: Thanks for pointing out the progress we've made since 1888.

DEAR ABBY: My husband says that I snore, but I know I don't. One thing I know for certain is that HE snores; and if I don't fall asleep before he does. I am up all night. He tells ME that HE is up all night because of MY snoring, which is ridiculous because if he were up he wouldn't be keeping ME up with his snoring.

How can we find out the truth? Don't suggest we have a third party sleep with us a s I am very old-fashioned.

HATTIE

DEAR HATTIE: Buy, rent or borrow a tape recorder and turn it on when you both retire. Whoever is awake while the other is snoring should say, "I am awake, so YOU must be snoring!" And that should settle it!

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Opening lead - six of hearts.

Most readers don't like fancy hands; they generally prefer hands that are simple, interesting and instructive. But the fact is that in some deals only fancy shenanigans will do the job, and here is a case that illustrates the point.

South was in three notrump and won the heart lead with the queen. After cashing the A-K of spades, he led a club and finessed the jack. East took the king and returned a heart to declarer's ace. When South now entered dummy with a club, West showed out and there was then no way for him to make the contract.

South was certainly unlucky to find East with four clubs to the K-10, but he could have insured the contract 100 per cent by adopting an unusual method of play. All he had to do after cashing the A-K of spades was lead a club to the ace, then play the jack of spades from dummy and discard the ace of hearts!

West wins the spade with the queen but is helpless. If he persists with hearts by leading a low one to dummy's ten, declarer winds up scoring four spade tricks, two hearts, two diamonds and one club.

If West, instead, shifts to a low diamond at trick six, South wins with the king and plays a club to dummy's Q-J. East takes the king and can do no better than return a diamond. Declarer wins with the ace, plays a club to the queen, cashes dummy's spades and has nine of the coldest tricks ever seen. They consist of four spades, one heart, two diamonds and two clubs.

So don't automatically sell these fancy plays short. Sometimes they do a lot of good.

Intelligence Linked To Family Size

New York (UPI) — New evidence indicates that intelligence depends not on race, class, genetics or income but rather on the number of children a family has, a published report said

The report said the fewer children a family has the more likelihood there is for the children to possess higher IQs and that they are better off if the intervals between the births are stretched out

The conclusions are based on a study conducted by Robert B. Zajonc, professor of psychology at the University of Michigan

Zajonc and his collegue, Dr. Gregory Markus, suggested that the child's rate of mental development is influenced by the amount of adult knowledge available to him or her They said a child's intellectual skills tend to grow more rapidly when parental knowledge is not shared by the presence of two or more children

The study was evaluated in an article published in the April issue of Psychology Today

The article, written by Dr Carol Tavris, assistant managing editor of the magazine, said

"The intellectual level of each additional child is diluted by his contact with young siblings, who have not reached full adult intelligence A child who is the fifth of five grows up in a world influenced heavily by five child-sized minds the first-born child, by contrast, grows up with his parents as primary forces, which gives him the maximum intellectual capacity "

The magazine article also said the decline in scholastic aptitude test scores of high school seniors will halt by 1980 and begin to climb again

By 1980 the children born in the early 60's will be in high school and ready to take their SATs The article said there will be proportionately more first and second born students

LONG LIFE . . . but Mrs. Whitaker had to work hard.

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Elizabeth Whitaker was in her late 20s at the birth of the Twentieth Century. She lived through two world wars and the Great Depression of the 1930s. She has witnessed the U.S. moon walk and the demoralizing Watergate scandal.

She doesn't know how she did it, but Mrs. Whitaker is 102 years and five months old.

"I didn't expect to live this long," she said. But she is still going strong, because, as she puts it, "you have to to get anywhere."

Mrs. Whitaker suspects, however, that her longevity is a result of hard work and kindness to those around her.

"You know what the Bible says — honor your parents and be good to your neighbor," she explained.

Mrs. Whitaker had to work hard while being good to her neighbors — for many years she was a midwife and has delivered more babies than she can remember.

"One thing I'm sorry about is that I never set (wrote) them all down," she said. But she recalls delivering nine children in one family and nearly as many with several other families.

According to Mrs. Whitaker, it was not unusual for her "to get up in the middle of the night and go when people couldn't get a doctor."

The hours were long and the pay was low. Besides the actual delivery, Mrs. Whitaker said, midwives were expected to take care of the rest of the family, the mother and the new baby.

"You were lucky if you got $4 a day," she said. "I remember getting only $1.50 a day and I took care of three children, the husband, the mother and the baby. Some places you would go and you wouldn't get nothing."

Unlike today when doctors and hospitals assume the responsibility of reporting births, Mrs. Whitaker said many years ago it was up to the parents to report to a local person charged with keeping such records — the school principal, minister or, if there was one, the county clerk.

And because many people felt it was no one's business when they had an addition to the family, births often went unreported, Mrs. Whitaker said.

"One couple didn't report the birth of their son, so when the son grew up they had trouble getting him into school," she added.

Overall, Mrs. Whitaker said, everyone worked hard to attain just the basic necessities of life during the early 1900s.

"If you would tell kids today how hard people had to get anything or how far they had to go just to get flour, they wouldn't believe it," she said. "I remember one woman who would put wheat in a cloth and beat it with a plank when she ran out of flour

"We usually had flour, but we had to go from Columbus to Fremont to get it. Then they built flour mills 20 miles away from where we lived, so we took a load of wheat to the mills, had it ground and then came home."

Born Nov. 1, 1873, Mrs. Whitaker lived in a small town near Bremen, Germany, until she emigrated to the U.S. at the age of eight.

Mrs. Whitaker lived with relatives near Leigh until the family moved to Columbus. She resided in Columbus until two years ago, when she moved to Lincoln to live with her granddaughter, Mrs. Adolph Morlok.

During all her years in Nebraska, Mrs. Whitaker didn't attend school, except for two months at a school where the children were taught in German. "The old people wanted it that way," she explained.

She speaks English fluently, however, with no hint of her German background. "I learned to read and write by just picking it up from the newspaper," she said.

Mrs. Whitaker had four children — three sons and one daughter — and now counts six grandchildren, 25 great-grandchildren and 12 great-great-grandchildren.

And, quite frankly, the centenarian doesn't like "all the publicity." She has lived to be more than 102 but, as she puts it:

Sculpture Outcry Believed Fading

Art Thompson, director of the Nebraska I-80 Bicentennial Sculpture Project, says that six months after the initial furor over the projects, attitudes have changed. Thompson said people come up to him now and say they didn't understand the project before when they opposed it.

Thompson said "there are people everywhere who change their skeptical attitudes once they understand the project."

"Some people who didn't like it before don't like it now," he said. "But many weren't really opposed to the sculptures, just the method" of selecting the pieces.

Thompson admits all the projects will not be completed by July 4 because of a dealy caused by legislative hearings on the project.

Concrete is being poured in York, Ogallala, and Brady, but final approval of plans by the State Department of Roads is slowing progress at Kimball, Sidney, Cozad, Kearney, Grand Island and Omaha. Thompson hopes to have five done on the nation's 200th birthday and believes attitudes will change even more when the sculptures are completed.

"Once they see the real thing, their reaction has got to be different," he said.

Brad Graves, who is building the York sculpture, said, "People see you are a professional just like a doctor or an engineer. I think they now have accepted me as another professional."

But not everyone has accepted the projects.

One of the projects' more vocal opponents, York City Councilwoman Jody Blum, said she enjoys Graves, but "can't stand his work."

She said her attitudes haven't changed.

She said no one listened when they complained "so why keep rattling your chains?"

Josephine Wachter of Unadilla, who spoke against the projects at the hearings, said everyone figures it was a losing game. "We were lied to and are still appalled at what is being called a bicentennial project."

Jewell Grasmic of rural Seward said the sculptures will do nothing but cost taxpayers money. "Wait till these kids out here get their paints and pails together and start putting their graffiti all over them. Who's going to take care of all that?"

Man Ends Up Paying To Recover His Car

Omaha (AP) — Kenneth W. Melies of Omaha has recovered his stolen car, but he had to pay a fee to do so.

Melies was robbed of his wallet and auto by a gunman at a car wash last week. Police suspected the gunman used the vehicle in a holdup.

The day after the car was taken, the thief called Mrs. Melies and said the auto was parked near a restaurant. The man said: "I know the police are slow in getting around to finding these things. I thought you might want it."

He also promised to mail her husband's wallet, but without its $16.

Deputy sheriffs found the car undamaged, but Mrs. Melies said they declined to release it until the investigation was complete.

Melies was later called and told the car was in a tow lot and was available. He had to pay $32.50 to retrieve it. Part of the expense included an overnight storage fee.

Mrs. Melies said the wallet has not been returned.

Education Board Joins O'Neill Project Lawsuit

The State Board of Educational Lands and Funds has asked to be a defendant in the Save the Niobrara Association's suit against the O'Neill irrigation project.

A U.S. District Court petition, filed by Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas, says the board has a "direct and substantial" interest because it controls 6,000 acres of public school land which would benefit by irrigation.

The board manages the state's public school lands.

The association's suit charges that the environmental impact statement for the project is inaccurate. The project would dam the Niobrara near Valentine to provide irrigation for north central Nebraska.

"The (board) is the largest landowner in the (Niobrara Basin) Irrigation district, owning approximately 8% of the lands to receive irrigation water once the O'Neill Unit is completed." the petition said.

"Once the 6,000 acres are irrigated, the value of these public school lands will increase tremendously — four, five or possibly six times their present value."

The North Central Nebraska Reclamation District and the Niobrara Basin Irrigation District have been allowed to intervene in the suit.

U.S. District Court Judge Warren Ubrom has yet to rule on the board's intervention.

Family-Owned Restaurant Files For Bankruptcy

Omaha (AP) — Firmatures-Trentino Restaurant Monday filed for an arrangement of debts under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

The family-owned and operated restaurant and cocktail lounge will remain open for business, according to Sonny Firmature, co-owner and manager.

He said all employes will be retained and the only change will be that the restaurant now will be open Sundays, some new menu items will be added and some price changes will be made.

Firmature said it was decided to seek an arrangement for paying debts because the family didn't want to sell the restaurant which was founded by his grandfather, Anthony C. Pirruccello, in 1932.

David Lanphier, attorney for the restaurant, said the debts were about $125,000. He said the problem is one of cash flow and the filing permits the restaurant to stay in business.

Largest G.I. Shopping Center Under New Management May 1

Grand Island (UPI) — Grand Island's largest shopping center, Conestoga Mall Inc., will be under new management as of May 1.

Officials of Teachers Insurance & Annuity Association of America said Tuesday their wholly-owned subsidiary, W.R.C. Properties Inc., the new owners of the mall, have entered into a management agreement with a California firm.

The firm, Hahn Inc., based in Hawthorne, Calif., is the third largest developer and professional management company in the country, teachers officials said.

They said Hahn has 30 years of experience and "will bring with them to Grand Island a vast background of shopping center knowledge."

The mall officially changed hands in February when teachers paid more than $9.2 million for it. Officials said with the change of management all present mall employes would be retained.

Tax Fraud Trial Begins June 1

Omaha (AP) — Omaha businessman R. Bruce Widstrom, president of R. Bruce Widstrom Associates, Inc., was arraigned Tuesday on federal charges of failing to deposit Social Security and income taxes withheld from the wages of his employes.

Under federal law, the money withheld must be deposited in a special trust account.

Stepmother Wants To Get Married

DEAR ABBY. I know I've done wrong, but please help me because I'm in such a mess I don't know what to do

I was 15 when my mother died, so my father and I "batched" it nearly two years. My father finally decided to marry Neva who was 37 and fairly nice-looking. Dad was 57

Everything would have been fine if I had had any sense, but I started fooling around with Neva when my father was at work. Neva got pregnant I was scared out of my wits, but Neva said she could make my father think the baby was his, so I shouldn't worry

Neva had twin boys, and my father was the happiest man on earth Everything was working out fine until the twins were 8-months-old Then, with no warning, my father had a heart attack and died. Neva and I were in a state of shock for several days and didn't know what to do

My father left enough insurance, cash and property for Neva and the twins to live comfortably and for me to go to college Now Neva doesn't want me to go to college. She wants me to marry her — and help her raise the twins! She says they are as much mine as hers I want to do what's right, but I don't want to live with Neva the rest of my life Please help me

DEAR TRAPPED: The twins could be your father's — and legally they are his sons, so don't feel duty-bound to marry Neva and sacrifice your college education to stay home and help raise the boys. Keep a respectable distance from Neva, and with alittle luck she'll find another man.

DEAR ABBY. Whenever I attend a double-ring ceremony, I wonder if the bride and groom realize that there is no justification whatsoever for a man's wearing a wedding ring

The wedding ring is a symbol of bondage of females in marriage It's the last relic of the collar and shackles with which captive and purchased brides were (and in some parts of the world still are) bound to their male masters

I quote from an old German prayer book (1888).

"The wedding ring is for the bride only and is a symbol of her bondage, subjection to and obedience to her master; a sign that she is now no longer free and independent, but that she is bound and chained under the mastery of her husband."

HISTORY BUFF

DEAR BUFF: Thanks for pointing out the progress we've made since 1888.

DEAR ABBY: My husband says that I snore, but I know I don't. One thing I know for certain is that HE snores, and if I don't fall asleep before he does. I am up all night. He tells ME that HE is up all night because of MY snoring, which is ridiculous because if he were up he wouldn't be keeping ME up with his snoring.

How can we find out the truth? Don't suggest we have a third party sleep with us a s I am very old-fashioned.

HATTIE

DEAR HATTIE: Buy, rent or borrow a tape recorder and turn it on when you both retire. Whoever is awake while the other is snoring should say, "I am awake, so YOU must be snoring!" And that should settle it!

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Opening lead - six of hearts.

Most readers don't like fancy hands; they generally prefer hands that are simple, interesting and instructive. But the fact is that in some deals only fancy shenanigans will do the job, and here is a case that illustrates the point.

South was in three notrump and won the heart lead with the queen. After cashing the A-K of spades, he led a club and finessed the jack. East took the king and returned a heart to declarer's ace. When South now entered dummy with a club, West showed out and there was then no way for him to make the contract.

South was certainly unlucky to find East with four clubs to the K-10, but he could have insured the contract 100 per cent by adopting an unusual method of play All he had to do after cashing the A-K of spades was lead a club to the ace, then play the jack of spades from dummy and discard the ace of hearts'

West wins the spade with the queen but is helpless. If he persists with hearts by leading a low one to dummy's ten, declarer winds up scoring four spade tricks, two hearts, two diamonds and one club

If West, instead, shifts to a low diamond at trick six South wins with the king and plays a club to dummy's Q-J. East takes the king and can do no better than return a diamond Declarer wins with the ace, plays a club to the queen, cashes dummy's spades and has nine of the coldest tricks ever seen They consist of four spades, one heart, two diamonds and two clubs

FRESH Time . . .

It's almost the time of year again when fresh vegetables are at their best—in available amounts and quality. Fresh vegetables are very economical foods when you use your best buying judgment and skills in making your selection and purchases. Here are a few How-to-Buy-Fresh tips. Select the "in season" varieties—they're less expensive. Choose those that are crisp, firm and bright in color and free from decay. Buy those which have been kept cool,—vegetables that are kept in hot, sunny places wilt rapidly and may lose some of their nutritive values. Learn what to look for in each variety and type.

The best recipe in the world won't be successful if the vegetables have lost flavor, color and nutritive value through improper cooking techniques. Some of the basic rules bear repeating: Guard against overcooking; crisp tender is best. Use as little water as possible—remember to use any cooking liquid as that's where some of the water soluble nutrients will be. Use a sharp knife to pare and peel—a dull knife bruises vegetable surfaces and hasten the loss of nutrients. Do not add soda to cooking vegetables,—it can make them soft and mushy.

"Experiment"—is the by-word of good cooks everywhere. Vegetables are versatile...but explore their true versatility by exploring different cooking techniques. For more help about some of these different techniques, drop me a note and ask for "Selecting and Cooking FRESH."

Sculpture Outcry Believed Fading

Art Thompson, director of the Nebraska I-80 Bicentennial Sculpture Project, says that six months after the initial furor over the projects, attitudes have changed. Thompson said people come up to him now and say they didn't understand the project before when they opposed it.

Thompson said "there are people everywhere who change their skeptical attitudes once they understand the project."

"Some people who didn't like it before don't like it now," he said. "But many weren't really opposed to the sculptures, just the method" of selecting the pieces.

Thompson admits all the projects will not be completed by July 4 because of a dealy caused by legislative hearings on the project.

Concrete is being poured in York, Ogallala, and Brady, but final approval of plans by the State Department of Roads is slowing progress at Kimball, Sidney, Cozad, Kearney, Grand Island and Omaha. Thompson hopes to have five done on the nation's 200th birthday and believes attitudes will change even more when the sculptures are completed.

"Once they see the real thing, their reaction has got to be different," he said.

Brad Graves, who is building the York sculpture, said, "People see you are a professional just like a doctor or an engineer. I think they now have accepted me as another professional."

But not everyone has accepted the projects.

One of the projects' more vocal opponents, York City Councilwoman Jody Blum, said she enjoys Graves, but "can't stand his work."

She said her attitudes haven't changed.

She said no one listened when they complained "so why keep rattling your chains?"

Josephine Wachter of Unadilla, who spoke against the projects at the hearings, said everyone figures it was a losing game. "We were lied to and are still appalled at what is being called a bicentennial project."

Jewell Grasmic of rural Seward said the sculptures will do nothing but cost taxpayers money. "Wait till these kids out here get their paints and pails together and start putting their graffiti all over them. Who's going to take care of all that?"

Man Ends Up Paying To Recover His Car

Omaha (AP) — Kenneth W. Melies of Omaha has recovered his stolen car, but he had to pay a fee to do so.

Melies was robbed of his wallet and auto by a gunman at a car wash last week. Police suspected the gunman used the vehicle in a holdup.

The day after the car was taken, the thief called Mrs. Melies and said the auto was parked near a restaurant. The man said: "I know the police are slow in getting around to finding these things. I thought you might want it."

He also promised to mail her husband's wallet, but without its $16.

Deputy sheriffs found the car undamaged, but Mrs. Melies said they declined to release it until the investigation was complete.

Melies was later called and told the car was in a tow lot and was available. He had to pay $32.50 to retrieve it. Part of the expense included an overnight storage fee.

Mrs. Melies said the wallet has not been returned.

Education Board Joins O'Neill Project Lawsuit

The State Board of Educational Lands and Funds has asked to be a defendant in the Save the Niobrara Association's suit against the O'Neill irrigation project.

A U.S. District Court petition, filed by Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas, says the board has a "direct and substantial" interest because it controls 6,000 acres of public school land which would benefit by irrigation.

The board manages the state's public school lands.

The association's suit charges that the environmental impact statement for the project is inaccurate. The project would dam the Niobrara near Valentine to provide irrigation for north central Nebraska.

"The (board) is the largest landowner in the (Niobrara Basin) Irrigation district, owning approximately 8% of the lands to receive irrigation water once the O'Neill Unit is completed." the petition said.

"Once the 6,000 acres are irrigated, the value of these public school lands will increase tremendously — four, five or possibly six times their present value."

The North Central Nebraska Reclamation District and the Niobrara Basin Irrigation District have been allowed to intervene in the suit.

U.S. District Court Judge Warren Ubrom has yet to rule on the board's intervention.

Family-Owned Restaurant Files For Bankruptcy

Omaha (AP) — Firmatures-Trentino Restaurant Monday filed for an arrangement of debts under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

The family-owned and operated restaurant and cocktail lounge will remain open for business. according to Sonny Firmature, co-owner and manager.

He said all employes will be retained and the only change will be that the restaurant now will be open Sundays, some new menu items will be added and some price changes will be made.

Firmature said it was decided to seek an arrangement for paying debts because the family didn't want to sell the restaurant which was founded by his grandfather, Anthony C. Pirruccello, in 1932.

David Lanphier, attorney for the restaurant, said the debts were about $125,000. He said the problem is one of cash flow and the filing permits the restaurant to stay in business.

Largest G.I. Shopping Center Under New Management May 1

Grand Island (UPI) — Grand Island's largest shopping center, Conestoga Mall Inc., will be under new management as of May 1.

Officials of Teachers Insurance & Annuity Association of America said Tuesday their wholly-owned subsidiary, W.R.C. Properties Inc., the new owners of the mall, have entered into a management agreement with a California firm.

The firm, Hahn Inc., based in Hawthorne, Calif., is the third largest developer and professional management company in the country, teachers officials said.

They said Hahn has 30 years of experience and "will bring with them to Grand Island a vast background of shopping center knowledge."

The mall officially changed hands in February when teachers paid more than $9.2 million for it. Officials said with the change of management all present mall employes would be retained.

Tax Fraud Trial Begins June 1

Omaha (AP) — Omaha businessman R. Bruce Widstrom, president of R. Bruce Widstrom Associates, Inc., was arraigned Tuesday on federal charges of failing to deposit Social Security and income taxes withheld from the wages of his employes.

Under federal law, the money withheld must be deposited in a special trust account.

Appearing before U.S. District Court Judge Robert V. Denney, Widstrom pleaded innocent to the 27 counts included in the information filed against him April 5. Denney ordered Widstrom to stand trial beginning June 1.

Dogs To Be Topic

Ford Held Responsible In Omaha Woman's Death

St. Louis (UPI) — A federal appeals court Tuesday upheld a $55,000 judgment against the Ford Motor Co. in the death of an Omaha woman in a 1971 auto crash.

A jury had awarded the money to the administrator of the estate of Pearl L. Norgaard, who was killed in the collision of her 1968 Ford Mustang and another car at an Omaha intersection.

The suite against Ford said the car's left door latch was defective and allowed the victim to be thrown from the car, suffering fatal injuries.

The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals agreed there was "sufficient evidence of unsafe design creating a foreseeable and unreasonable risk of harm."

Judge Myron H. Bright, however, disagreed with the other two federal judges.

In a dissenting opinion, Bright said, "No doubt the manufacturers of automobiles could design and build an automobile with the strength and crash-damage resistance features of an M2 Army tank."

FRESH Time . . .

It's almost the time of year again when fresh vegetables are at their best – in available amounts and quality. Fresh vegetables are very economical foods when you use your best buying judgment and skills in making your selection and purchases. Here are a few How-to-Buy-Fresh tips. Select the "in season" varieties – they're less expensive. Choose those that are crisp, firm and bright in color and free from decay. Buy those which have been kept cool, – vegetables that are kept in hot, sunny places wilt rapidly and may lose some of their nutritive values. Learn what to look for in each variety and type.

The best recipe in the world won't be successful if the vegetables have lost flavor, color and nutritive value through improper cooking techniques. Some of the basic rules bear repeating: Guard against overcooking; crisp tender is best. Use as little water as possible – remember to use any cooking liquid as that's where some of the water soluble nutrients will be. Use a sharp knife to pare and peel – a dull knife bruises vegetable surfaces and hasten the loss of nutrients. Do not add soda to cooking vegetables. – it can make them soft and mushy.

"Experiment" – is the by-word of good cooks everywhere. Vegetables are versatile . . . but explore their true versatility by exploring different cooking techniques. For more help about some of these different techniques, drop me a note and ask for "Selecting and Cooking FRESH."

Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — The P.R. man at the bar in Bardelli's said: "I deducted a little over a thousand in business lunches. So figure I'm in a bracket where the government eases expenses. So this really cost me $750.

"Now I figure of those client entertainment lunches, I got one account that paid $750. It cost me a $50 lunch to get it. It cost $200 expenses to service it. This was a trial run. I expected it to go on and on.

"Add to this my office and secretary and phone overhead. Forget me. I'm used to working for nothing. Anyway, I figured out, I came out with maybe two bills. Probably less."

☆ ☆ ☆

I slipped my big brown envelope in the mail box ("Goodbye forever") and went out to see how the rest of the world was doing on the day of taxes.

Tax deductions are piddling things if you get your living from work. Big tax savings are reserved for the wealthy and therefore more worthy.

Dropped by Vanessi's in North Beach. Here the legal beagles lift each other by the ears. Client lunches should certainly be deductible. There may be a furtive client or two in Vanessi's.

"If somebody stumbled over the doorstep, God help us," said the waiter. "A hundred lawyers would be jammed in the doorway trying to sign him up for personal injury."

☆ ☆ ☆

My own taxes were higher this year. I said: "How come, Accountant? I made the same as last year. And for last year's dollar I couldn't buy what I bought for a dollar the year before."

There is no answer to this. The $2 bill is back again after 10 year's absence. Today it is worth $1.15.

Alimony Row at Perry's sits glumly staring at the world through the bottom of an old-fashioned glass.

"Alimony is deductible," said the Born Loser. "But what do you deduct it from?"

☆ ☆ ☆

"What you need is a tax shelter," said a man who advises on ways to improve your money situation.

We don't improve ourselves financially by making higher wages, bless your innocent heart. We improve ourselves by "legal loopholes" — barn doors Congress forgot to close.

I said: "Money Man, the only way I'm ever going to improve my position is with a stocking mask and a pistol."

Bank robbers don't bother to make a tax return. It's a low overhead business and you work banker's hours: Open at 10, close at 3.

☆ ☆ ☆

Tax day around town was not a day of gloom. We've become a nation of good loses. Easy come, easy go.

What can you do about it? It's the only game in town.

Carnation in the buttonholes, no underwear.

"Of course, it makes us into a nation of neurotics," said a lawyer at the oak bar in Doro's. "Do you cheat — just a little on the tax? Deduct a lunch that was not quite business?

"That's going to take some sleep out of your nights. Once in awhile you take a sleeping pill. 'I must have drunk too much coffee.' No, you need an easier conscience."

Democratic Hopes Faint Against Rep. Thone

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Democrats this year will be mounting their third biennial assault for the congressional seat held by incumbent Republican Rep. Charles Thone of Lincoln.

But Democrats and Republicans alike recognize that Mrs. Pauline Anderson, a long-time party worker from Lincoln who is seeking her first elective post, is a long-shot to upset the 52-year-old Thone.

The record bears this out. In 1972, Thone defeated the Rev. Darrel Berg, whose campaign Mrs. Anderson managed, with a comfortable 56,000 vote margin. In 1974 against a stronger candidate (former State Democratic Party Chairman Hess Dyas), Thone won by 12,000 votes.

Mrs. Anderson, a last-minute entry into the race after Lincoln businessman Bill Harris declined to run, has said she does not expect to raise the more than $100,000 in contributions that Dyas did, but does hope to raise more than the $30,000 spent by Berg.

Thone, meanwhile, expects to raise about $120,000 for his re-election to a fourth House term.

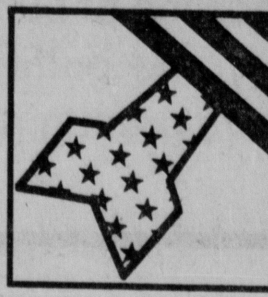
Thone Favored

Indeed, the apparent reluctance of First District Democrats to challenge Thone reflects the fact he is the odds-on favorite.

Mrs. Anderson has yet to define her positions on the issues and to delineate how she differs in opinion from Thone.

Thone, on the other hand, has a voting record in Congress for voters to examine.

It indicates that Thone is perhaps the least conservative member of the Nebraska congressional delegation and was one of only seven House of Representatives members who took part in every recorded vote during 1975.



As a member of the House Agriculture Committee, Thone repeatedly has wooed the farm vote in his district.

He has introduced legislation to get the exemption from federal estate taxes on farms and small businesses raised from $60,000 to $200,000. Unless such a change is made, Thone said many family-owned farms will be forced out of existence.

Thone also worked to get the Packers and Stockyards Act amended to protect livestock producers from losses caused by processors' bankruptcies, such as occurred with American Beef in 1975.

In essence, Thone tried to get livestock producers moved from the back to the front of the creditors' line in the event of a bankruptcy.

Other actions which struck responsive chords with voters included Thone's joining a number of other House members in a lawsuit to block the Postal Service's plans to close a number of small rural post offices for economic reasons.

In addition, as a member of the House Government Operations Committee, Thone has voiced concerns over President Ford's proposal to drop certain Amtrak routes, including the lone one across Nebraska.

Faces Uphill Struggle

Mrs. Anderson, 56, is starting from scratch and faces an uphill battle to gain voter recognition. She has a varied background, having worked in California shipyards during World War II, as a teacher and as a truck driver for the Army.

Until recently, she was the director of a federally aided program for the aged called the Retired Senior Volunteer Program.

Due to her involvement with senior citizens, Mrs. Anderson has some strong opinions about how the federal government should help them.

Help For Aged

She said Social Security payments must keep up with the cost of living and the costs assessed the aged for other forms of assistance must be held down. In addition, she said the elderly should be allowed to continue working past age 65 without jeopardizing their Social Security benefits.

On the subject of revenue sharing, she said Congress should expand it and remove all strings attached to it.

Asked if she favored embargoes on grain exports if it meant significant cost increases to American consumers, Mrs. Anderson had no comment.

She said she expects the economy to be the big issue in the 1976 election and added that she favors public works as a means of providing employment.

The term "sacrificial lamb" has been used in explaining her candidacy, but she said this is not true.

"I'm running to keep the Democratic process alive," she said. "If there had been another good candidate who filed, I wouldn't have. I do want to represent the First District. I believe it's time we had some Democratic representation on our congressional delegation."

Ford's Chairman Woos Resignation

By The Associated Press

President Ford's Nebraska campaign chairman has made overtures toward unslated Reagan delegate candidates, but initial replies were less than music to his ears.

William Barrett of Lexington, former Republican state chairman, wrote delegate candidates pledged to former California Gov. Ronald Reagan who didn't make a target group of 25 in Nebraska.

"It is regrettable that an action such as this had to be taken, which will now restrict the choice given our voters," Barrett wrote.

He said his committee backing President Ford considered such a slating technique, but rejected it "because it seemed to dilute the democratic process."

Barrett ended his letter with an obvious invitation for the unslated Reagan backers to join Ford forces.

"Looking forward to working with you, either now or in the near future," he wrote.

"It was a nice, friendly little letter," Barrett said from his Lexington office.

In Grand Island, Reagan's Nebraska chairman had this reaction to Barrett's ploy:

"We're glad that Mr. Barrett is at least creating the issue so we can get across what we're trying to accomplish."

Milan Bish, also a former GOP state chairman, said from his Grand Island office that the group of 25 targeted Reagan delegate candidates were chosen in a democratic manner during district caucuses by the bulk of the 108 filed Reagan supporters.

"This was not dictated by any of the leadership," he said.

In Omaha, 2nd congressional district Reagan chairman Mrs. Donald Lamp released a copy of a letter from nine unslated Reagan delegate candidates. Addressed to Barrett, it said:

"Please do not waste your sympathy" on us, and it was signed by the nine, who noted some Republicans want Reagan rather than a non-elected incumbent nominated.

By slating a target group of 25, the exact number Nebraska will send to the Republican National Convention, Reagan forces hope to win more seats on the delegation by avoiding a watered-down vote spread among the high number of delegate candidates.

Dinner Draws One Candidate

Democrats are still hoping for a number of presidential candidates at their annual Jefferson-Jackson Day fund-raising dinner May 7, State Chairman Dick White of Lincoln said Tuesday.

Thus far, only Sen. Frank Church of Idaho has formally accepted an invitation to address the giant dinner in Omaha.

Between 1,900 and 2,000 persons are expected to attend the event, scheduled for the Friday night before Nebraska's May 11 primary election.

White believes Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington will attend the dinner, and supporters of Jimmy Carter expect that he will add the event to his schedule.

But there have been no indications at all from either Alabama Gov. George Wallace or Congressman Morris Udall of Arizona, White said.

Equal time will be alloted to each of the presidential hopefuls to address the dinner audience.

Tickets are $55 apiece. A Century Club membership of $110 includes two tickets. A special bicentennial ticket costing $200 will include two reserved seats and a souvenir medallion.

Student tickets are $15 apiece.

UNL Professor To Visit Russia

Donald L. Johnson, a University of Nebraska professor of mechanical engineering, will go to Russia May 18-21 to present a research report before the Third International Conference on Titanium at Moscow State University.

Johnson will read a paper on the corrosive tendencies of titanium when exposed to hydrogen containing atmosphere.

Lincoln Youth Arrested Second Time In 2 Weeks

A Lincoln youth, 14, arrested two weeks ago for trying to enter an apartment wearing only a ski mask, was arrested again Tuesday for attempting to rape a woman in her home.

The woman, 24, told police she woke shortly before 5 a.m. Tuesday to find a naked male standing next to her bed.

She said he put a knee on her stomach and began to choke her. She struggled with him, managing to fight her way out of the bedroom and to the front door, bruising herself and cutting her leg on a table in the process.

The male then grabbed a choker necklace she was wearing and began to choke her until she almost blacked out, she told police.

The woman said she stopped fighting and began to cry and talk to him. He soon left and walked out the front door, she said.

The 6-foot-2, 140-pound youth was turned over to juvenile authorities about two weeks ago after he allegedly tried to enter the apartment of a young woman naked except for a ski mask.

Juvenile authorities decided to dispose of the case by securing an agreement from the youth and his family that they undergo psychological counseling and that he obey his parents and the law.

William Janike of the Lancaster County Juvenile Probation Office said the decision was made after psychological evaluation by the Child Guidance Center.

Police said the youth allegedly committed several burglaries in the neighborhood during the past several weeks. The youth agreed to make restitution for the burglaries.

He is being held in the Juvenile Attention Center and authorities are planning to file formal charges in Lancaster Juvenile Court.

Ford Held Responsible In Omaha Woman's Death

St Louis (UPI) — A federal appeals court Tuesday upheld a $55 000 judgment against the Ford Motor Co in the death of an Omaha woman in a 1971 auto crash

A jury had awarded the money to the administrator of the estate of Pearl L Norgaard who was killed in the collision of her 1968 Ford Mustang and another car at an Omaha intersection

The suite against Ford said the car s left door latch was defective and allowed the victim to be thrown from the car suffering fatal injuries

The 8th U S Circuit Court of Appeals agreed there was 'sufficient evidence of unsafe design creating a foreseeable and unreasonable risk of harm "

Judge Myron H Bright, however, disagreed with the other two federal judges

In a dissenting opinion, Bright said, No doubt the manufacturers of automobiles could design and build an automobile with the strength and crash-damage resistance features of an M2 Army tank "

Lincoln Teachers Get 7.62% Raise

Lincoln Public Schools teachers will get a 7.62% average increase in pay and fringe benefits this fall.

The Board of Education agreed Tuesday to the increase for 1976-77 contracts. It amounts to approximately $1.3 million, the equivalent of three mills.

"We believe this is a good settlement," said Supt. John Prasch. Louis Roper, board president, said it "seems to be equitable for both sides."

Exact costs for parts salary and fringe benefit values will be revealed Wednesday during final negotiations with the Lincoln Education Association. Basic pay would move from $8,415 to about $8,800 for a beginning teacher with a bachelors degree and no experience.

Prasch said the $424,863 fringe package will be boosted by about 30%, enough to allow benefit options beyond the 23% increase in Blue Cross-Blue Shield insurance premiums. Single cost will move from $16.30 to $19.89 monthly, and family from $41.30 to $50.86.

Calling the settlement terms "productive," Prasch noted teacher concerns about items not negotiated will be addressed by joint study committees responsive to the LEA.

Both the association and board must ratify the pact later.

Yet to be decided are pay proposals by non-teaching and support staff members. The Teacher Aide Association Tuesday requested a $101,500 salary budget increase, overtime rates, improved staff development and fringe benefits.

Operation and maintenance department employes asked the board for overtime pay, improved death, emergency and vacation leaves, travel reimbursements, increased monthly amounts for fringe benefits, and raises from $4.38 to $5.40 hourly.

In other business, the board:

— Authorized national access to the East High "Learning Community School" if the federal government validates the innovative project as a demonstration model.

— Informally agreed Prasch should seek bids on a Prescott Elementary playground improvement project, including landscaping, a track and playing field backstops. Approval would come later. More work proposed could depend on closing S. 20th in front of the school.

— Accepted two State Education Department mini-grants totalling $2,805 for elementary language and senior high media production courses.

— Agreed to hold meetings with parents in all 46 schools in three-hour sessions May 6, 13 and 20, each at 7 p.m.

— Sanctioned the Special Education Advisory Committee as a formal body, officially recognizing ifs work and board input. Parents and agencies will be represented in coordinating programs for handicapped children, communicating needs and lobbying.

— Agreed to study an idea to train the hard-core jobless through the Opportunities Industrialization Center.

— Allowed Axel C. Bolleson, 544 Lyncrest Drive, to plant trees on Eastridge Elementary property.

School Reading Programs Said Successful

A majority of students in an individual-progress reading program surpassed their expected achievement, the Lincoln Board of Education was told Tuesday.

But Board President Louis Roper worried aloud that the public schools "rely on system managers rather than teachers."

If the System One reading program is a crutch instead of a tool, he said, that's a "turn for the worse."

Board members Jo Ann Maxey and Lu Pansing expressed concern that self-paced learning programs isolate students, who they maintained should get more teacher attention.

Dwight Grandgenett, reading consultant, said that concerns him too. But he and Ron Brandt, associate superintendent for instruction, pointed out that most students in System One Reading Labs learn better, with more comprehension.

Sixty per cent made as much or more reading growth than expected, based on pre-test comparative scores, Grandgenett said. And 90% of them "had a positive attitude" toward the lab.

The System One program allows a teacher to set out individually for each student the material to be learned, its difficulty and the learning rate. Labs are used in 13 elementary schools and seven secondary schools, and include almost 400 objectives that can be mastered.

An evaluation of System One at Lincoln High, Lincoln East, Everett, Goodrich, Irving, Lefler and Whittier also showed positive results in six of the labs: students read an average of 11 library books and completed an average of 1.3 objectives weekly.

As students increased the number of objectives mastered, their reading growth scores also went up. Teachers spent an average of 3.5 hours weekly to maintain the program after school hours.

Grandgenett said System One will expand next year to Culler, Pound and Lincoln Northeast. Future plans include peer tutoring and the training of substitute lab teachers.

The board deferred action on a learning disabilities policy statement, which in part would allow a school to offer its own substitute program.

Group Asks To Aid Alcohol Plan

The fledgling Nebraska Task Force on Women, Alcohol and Drug Problems hopes to have more say on alcohol services for women at the ground level.

The group plans to ask the state alcoholism advisory council to create a subcommittee of task force members to oversee women's interests regarding alcohol abuse.

The task force will request time for its appeal at the advisory council's May 5 meeting.

The decision to work with the state advisory council was made at the suggestion of Dr. William Ford, state alcoholism director, who met with the task force Tuesday.

The task force wants to help draft the state alcoholism plan for 1977, which will be submitted to the state advisory council in mid-May. Final action is expected on the plan by July 1.

The woman alcoholic has not been singled out as a target population for development of alcoholism services, Ford told task force members. A bill recently passed by the U.S. Senate however, requires state rehabilitation plans to consider the woman alcoholic.

Lincoln Firm Says Union Discriminates

M. W. Anderson Construction Co. of Lincoln has filed a pair of complaints against Cement Masons Local 22 alleging that union members refused to work for a black foreman.

After learning of the complaints, the union's business representative Jack Walls said he had "no idea why the complaints were filed."

Later he suggested that maybe the reason cement masons refused to work with the forman was not because he was black but because he is not a union member.

The Anderson company filed suit Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Omaha and released a copy of an Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) complaint.

The EEOC complaint states in part: "The union has indicated that if M. W. Anderson removed its black cement foreman, the union would furnish men; otherwise they will not."

Cement foreman for the construction company is Claude McHolmes, who has been with the firm nearly 25 years, Anderson said.

He admitted the complaint goes "much deeper" than the discrimination charge. "This is something of long standing," he said.

The suit seeks $4,000 for damages and delay on projects, Anderson said, including "disruption of the men's morale."

McHolmes paid union initiation dues about a year ago, Walls recalled, "but that's as far as it went."

Union bylaws provide for a $50 fine if a union member works with a nonunion member, he pointed out.

"I don't know the full dtails," he said. "But this could be the reason my men refused to work" with McHolmes.

McHolmes was not immediately available for comment.

School Speed Zone Idea Rejected By Task Force

A citizens committee which wants motorists to watch out for children walking to school has concluded that reduced speed limits aren't the answer.

Monday night a 13-member task force rejected the Lincoln Alliance's proposal to put in 15-miles-per-hour speed zones around elementary and junior high schools.

The recommendation will be forwarded to Mayor Helen Boosalis, who asked the special committee to study the proposal.

The mayor said Tuesday she plans to meet with the committee before making a final decision, which is not expected for several weeks.

The task force rejected the Alliance's propopsal to institute reduced speed zones on a 9 to 4 vote. Six members of the committee were from the mayor's School Crossing Protection Committee. The remaining seven were citizens representing the Lincoln Alliance.

Members of the Alliance, which is composed of 32 organizations, believed lower speed limits would reduce accidents.

However, statistics showed that pedestrian related accidents in Lincoln weren't happening around the schools.

A check with 35 other communities revealed the only way those cities could get drivers to slow down around schools was rigid enforcement by police. A majority on the task force agreed that the Lincoln Police Department could spend its time on more serious problems.

The task force also indicated that reduced speed zones might create a false sense of security among students and parents alike.

A better way to control traffic is through the use of traffic signals located near the schools, said Rick Haden of the city traffic engineering staff.

"It is easier to get the driver to stop for a red light," he said.

Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — The P.R. man at the bar in Bardelli's said: "I deducted a little over a thousand in business lunches. So figure I'm in a bracket where the government eases expenses. So this really cost me $750.

"Now I figure of those client entertainment lunches. I got one account that paid $750. It cost me a $50 lunch to get it. It cost $200 expenses to service it. This was a trial run. I expected it to go on and on.

"Add to this my office and secretary and phone overhead. Forget me. I'm used to working for nothing. Anyway, I figured out, I came out with maybe two bills. Probably less."

☆ ☆ ☆

I slipped my big brown envelope in the mail box ("Goodbye forever") and went out to see how the rest of the world was doing on the day of taxes.

Tax deductions are piddling things if you get your living from work. Big tax savings are reserved for the wealthy and therefore more worthy.

Dropped by Vanessi's in North Beach. Here the legal beagles lift each other by the ears. Client lunches should certainly be deductible. There may be a furtive client or two in Vanessi's.

"If somebody stumbled over the doorstep, God help us," said the waiter. "A hundred lawyers would be jammed in the doorway trying to sign him up for personal injury."

☆ ☆ ☆

My own taxes were higher this year. I said: "How come, Accountant? I made the same as last year. And for last year's dollar I couldn't buy what I bought for a dollar the year before."

There is no answer to this. The $2 bill is back again after 10 year's absence. Today it is worth $1.15.

Alimony Row at Perry's sits glumly staring at the world through the bottom of an old-fashioned glass.

"Alimony is deductible," said the Born Loser. "But what do you deduct it from?"

☆ ☆ ☆

"What you need is a tax shelter," said a man who advises on ways to improve your money situation.

We don't improve ourselves financially by making higher wages, bless your innocent heart. We improve ourselves by "legal loopholes" — barn doors Congress forgot to close.

I said: "Money Man, the only way I'm ever going to improve my position is with a stocking mask and a pistol."

Bank robbers don't bother to make a tax return. It's a low overhead business and you work banker's hours: Open at 10, close at 3.

☆ ☆ ☆

Tax day around town was not a day of gloom. We've become a nation of good loses. Easy come, easy go.

What can you do about it? It's the only game in town.

Carnation in the buttonholes, no underwear.

"Of course, it makes us into a nation of neurotics," said a lawyer at the oak bar in Doro's. "Do you cheat — just a little on the tax? Deduct a lunch that was not quite business?

"That's going to take some sleep out of your nights. Once in awhile you take a sleeping pill. 'I must have drunk too much coffee.' No, you need an easier conscience."

Commissioner Quits

Washington (AP) — Terrel H. Bell, U.S. commissioner of education, said he is resigning effective Aug. 1 due to financial burdens. His new post as commissioner of higher education in Utah will pay almost $11,000 more than his federal salary, which is $37,800.

Democratic Hopes Faint Against Rep. Thone

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Democrats this year will be mounting their third biennial assault for the congressional seat held by incumbent Republican Rep Charles Thone of Lincoln

But Democrats and Republicans alike recognize that Mrs. Pauline Anderson, a long-time party worker from Lincoln who is seeking her first elective post is a long shot to upset the 52-year-old Thone

The record bears this out In 1972, Thone defeated the Rev Darrel Berg whose campaign Mrs Anderson managed, with a comfortable 56 000 vote margin In 1974 against a stronger candidate (former State Democratic Party Chairman Hess Dyas), Thone won by 12 000 votes

Mrs Anderson, a last-minute entry into the race after Lincoln businessman Bill Harris declined to run has said she does not expect to raise the more than $100,000 in contributions that Dyas did, but does hope to raise more than the $30,000 spent by Berg

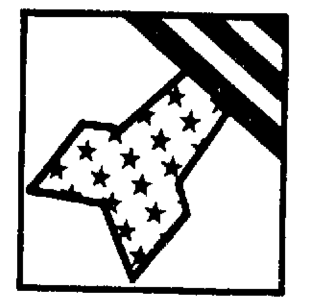
Thone Favored

Indeed the apparent reluctance of First District Democrats to challenge Thone reflects the fact he is the odds-on favorite

Mrs Anderson has yet to define her positions on the issues and to delineate how she differs in opinion from Thone

Thone, on the other hand, has a voting record in Congress for voters to examine

It indicates that Thone is perhaps the least conservative member of the Nebraska congressional delegation and was one of only seven House of Representatives members who took part in every recorded vote during 1975



As a member of the House Agriculture Committee, Thone repeatedly has wooed the farm vote in his district

He has introduced legislation to get the exemption from federal estate taxes on farms and small businesses raised from $60,000 to $200,000 Unless such a change is made, Thone said many family-owned farms will be forced out of existence

Thone also worked to get the Packers and Stockyards Act amended to protect livestock producers from losses caused by processors' bankruptcies, such as occurred with American Beef in 1975

In essence, Thone tried to get livestock producers moved from the back to the front of the creditors line in the event of a bankruptcy

Other actions which struck responsive chords with voters included Thone s joining a number of other House members in a lawsuit to block the Postal Service s plans to close a number of small rural post offices for economic reasons

In addition, as a member of the House Government Operations Committee, Thone has voiced concerns over President Ford s proposal to drop certain Amtrak routes, including the lone one across Nebraska

Faces Uphill Struggle

Mrs Anderson, 56, is starting from scratch and faces an uphill battle to gain voter recognition She has a varied background, having worked in California shipyards during World War II, as a teacher and as a truck driver for the Army

Until recently she was the director of a federally aided program for the aged called the Retired Senior Volunteer Program

Due to her involvement with senior citizens, Mrs Anderson has some strong opinions about how the federal government should help them

Help For Aged

She said Social Security payments must keep up with the cost of living and the costs assessed the aged for other forms of assistance must be held down In addition, she said the elderly should be allowed to continue working past age 65 without jeopardizing their Social Security benefits

On the subject of revenue sharing, she said Congress should expand it and remove all strings attached to it

Asked if she favored embargoes on grain exports if it meant significant cost increases to American consumers, Mrs Anderson had no comment

She said she expects the economy to be the big issue in the 1976 election and added that she favors public works as a means of providing employment

The term "sacrificial lamb" has been used in explaining her candidacy, but she said this is not true

"I'm running to keep the Democratic process alive," she said "If there had been another good candidate who filed, I wouldn't have I do want to represent the First District I believe it's time we had some Democratic representation on our congressional delegation "

Ford's Chairman Woos Resignation

By The Associated Press

President Ford s Nebraska campaign chairman has made overtures toward unslated Reagan delegate candidates, but initial replies were less than music to his ears

William Barrett of Lexington, former Republican state chairman, wrote delegate candidates pledged to former California Gov Ronald Reagan who didn t make a target group of 25 in Nebraska

"It is regrettable that an action such as this had to be taken which will now restrict the choice given our voters ' Barrett wrote

He said his committee backing President Ford considered such a slating technique, but rejected it because it seemed to dilute the democratic process

Barrett ended his letter with an obvious invitation for the unslated Reagan backers to join Ford forces

"Looking forward to working with you, either now or in the near future," he wrote

' It was a nice, friendly little letter," Barrett said from his Lexington office

In Grand Island, Reagan s Nebraska chairman had this reaction to Barrett s ploy

' We re glad that Mr Barrett is at least creating the issue so we can get across what we re trying to accomplish

Milan Bish, also a former GOP state chairman, said from his Grand Island office that the group of 25 targeted Reagan delegate candidates were chosen in a democratic manner during district caucuses by the bulk of the 108 filed Reagan supporters

'This was not dictated by any of the leadership,' he said

In Omaha, 2nd congressional district Reagan chairman Mrs Donald Lamp released a copy of a letter from nine unslated Reagan delegate candidates Addressed to Barrett, it said

' Please do not waste your sympathy on us and it was signed by the nine who noted some Republicans want Reagan rather than a non-elected incumbent nominated

By slating a target group of 25 the exact number Nebraska will send to the Republican National Convention, Reagan forces hope to win more seats on the delegation by avoiding a watered-down vote spread among the high number of delegate candidates

Dinner Draws One Candidate

Democrats are still hoping for a number of presidential candidates at their annual Jefferson-Jackson Day fund-raising dinner May 7 State Chairman Dick White of Lincoln said Tuesday

Thus far only Sen Frank Church of Idaho has formally accepted an invitation to address the giant dinner in Omaha

Between 1 900 and 2 000 persons are expected to attend the event, scheduled for the Friday night before Nebraska's May 11 primary election

White believes Sen Henry Jackson of Washington will attend the dinner and supporters of Jimmy Carter expect that he will add the event to his schedule

But there have been no indications at all from either Alabama Gov George Wallace or Congressman Morris Udall of Arizona, White said

Equal time will be alloted to each of the presidential hopefuls to address the dinner audience

Tickets are $55 apiece A Century Club membership of $110 includes two tickets A special bicentennial ticket costing $200 will include two reserved seats and a souvenir medallion

Student tickets are $15 apiece

Lincoln Youth Arrested Second Time In 2 Weeks

A Lincoln youth, 14, arrested two weeks ago for trying to enter an apartment wearing only a ski mask was arrested again Tuesday for attempting to rape a woman in her home

The woman 24, told police she woke shortly before 5 a m Tuesday to find a naked male standing next to her bed

She said he put a knee on her stomach and began to choke her She struggled with him, managing to fight her way out of the bedroom and to the front door, bruising herself and cutting her leg on a table in the process

The male then grabbed a choker necklace she was wearing and began to choke her until she almost blacked out, she told police

The woman said she stopped fighting and began to cry and talk to him He soon left and walked out the front door, she said

The 6-foot-2, 140-pound youth was turned over to juvenile authorities about two weeks ago after he allegedly tried to enter the apartment of a young woman naked except for a ski mask

Juvenile authorities decided to dispose of the case by securing an agreement from the youth and his family that they undergo psychological counseling and that he obey his parents and the law

William Janke of the Lancaster County Juvenile Probation Office said the decision was made after psychological evaluation by the Child Guidance Center

Police said the youth allegedly committed several burglaries in the neighborhood during the past several weeks The youth agreed to make restitution for the burglaries

He is being held in the Juvenile Attention Center and authorities are planning to file formal charges in Lancaster Juvenile Court.

Many To Lose Food Stamps

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — There's no question but that more than one million people soon will be thrown off the food-stamp program. President Ford has a list of administrative changes ready to go into effect June 1, unless Congress pre-empts him with a bill of its own. The congressional bill is not as draconian as the President's plan, which would cut 5.3 million persons out of the program, but is still aimed at cutting the rolls by 1.4 million persons.

It's too early to know for sure to what extent Congress will change Ford's program (the Senate has passed its version, but the House is still holding hearings). Furthermore, when the new regulations go into effect June 1, they will immediately be challenged as illegal by the New York-based Food Research and Action Center. But my associate Anne Wolman has been investigating the changes under way, and it appears that when the dust settles, the following groups will be most affected:

— People whose way of life approached middle class, but are undergoing a financial reversal. Today, a family of four can get food stamps if their net income is no more than $553 a month ($6,636 a year).

In figuring "net income," they can deduct from their wages a number of basic expenses such as taxes, babysitting if the mother works, certain medical costs, tuition, and sometimes even a portion of rent, mortgage payments and utilities. This gives some families making $8,000 to $9,000 limited aid from food stamps.

But after June 1, there will be a flat $100 deduction ($125 if you're 65 or over). This will have the effect of ruling out people whose income is above the poverty level, but whose basic expenses leave them genuinely poor if their income suddenly stops.

A family of four won't be able to get food stamps if its monthly income, after the $100 deductible, is more than $458 a month ($5,500 a year). The intent is to prevent people with higher incomes from benefiting from a program meant for the poor. But the effect is to withhold help from people who, on a temporary basis, should probably have it.

— The very poor. These people rarely have many expenses that qualify as deductions under present rules, so the flat $100 or $125 deduction will improve their position.

— The working poor. Those whose incomes hover above the poverty line may lose quite a bit. The basic eligibility level for everyone will be set exactly at the official poverty line, whereas at present some 26% of food-stamp families exceed that limit (though generally not by much).

Aside from this sizable cut in food benefits, a twist in the President's program has this socially disastrous result: of the people who qualify for food stamps, those on welfare will have more disposable income than those who work. That's because income is evaluated on exactly the same basis, whether it comes from a paycheck or from public assistance.

A family of four with a net income from either source of, say, $400 a month would qualify for the same amount of stamps. However, the working family has to pay income taxes and Social Security taxes, which the welfare family does not. So the welfare family winds up with more money.

Fortunately, the bill passed in the Senate allows the working poor to deduct taxes separately, and raises their flat deduction to $125. This encourages them to stay on the job rather than quit and go on welfare.

The administration opposes this approach, because it costs more money. But if we are to have any hope of digging out of the welfare morass, we must stop designing systems that make it smarter to live on welfare than accept a low-paid job.

GNP Figures Spark Rise In Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took a second look at the Gross National Product figures for this year and surged sharply and broadly higher Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks shot up 15.35 points to close at 1,003.46, its highest close since it finished at 1,004.09 on April 5.

The advance spread throughout the market during the day, with rising New York Stock Exchange issues taking a 12-3 lead on those declining. And the exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .80 to 54.76.

The 7.5 per cent annual growth rate of the nation's output of goods and services in the first three months of the year, announced Monday by the Commerce Department, was better than many investors had anticipated.

"Those figures answered some of the fears the market had concerning the durability of the recovery," analyst Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp. said.

Polaroid was the Big Board's most active issue, jumping more than four points in price.

Analysts said the announcement removed constraints on buying Polaroid stock, which some thought to be well-priced.

First National Corp. Tells Dip In Net Income

First National Lincoln Corp. has reported a 12.4% decline in net income in the first three months of 1976 compared to the first quarter of 1975. This means a reduction of $1.38 per share to $1.21.

Chairman of the Board, Burnham Yates, said the net income decline resulted from a decrease in the level of interest rates on loans and investments and an increase in operating expenses.

Yates cited the new banking facility at 56th and O and two new computer data collection centers as accounting for most of the increase in operating expenses.

Futures Trim Early Gains

Chicago (AP) — Profit-taking reared up again in the closing minutes on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday and strong, early gains were heavily trimmed.

Before the selling had set in, wheat and soybeans had been up about 6 cents, corn 3½ and oats 3. Oats closed with its best gain in the nearby months, but the soybeans gain was halved while corn closed mixed and wheat was down 3 cents. Soy oil gained about 20 points but meal futures were down just a shade over $1 a ton. Iced broiler prices were about steady at the final bell.

Large Run Depresses Hog Prices

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—A large run sent hog prices lower on the Omaha livestock market Tuesday, while cattle also lost ground.

The day's hog run was estimated at about 7,200 head, which was well above the advance estimates.

The trade on barrows and gilts was active. Opening sales trended from $1.50-to-$1.75 lower, but closing sales were termed $1.00-to-$1.50 off.

The cattle run was also on the large side, being estimated at about 6,500 head.

Slaughter steers opened slow, but turned moderately active during later trading rounds. Choice steers trended 50-to-75 cents lower, with other classes called unevenly weak to 50-cents lower.

Heifers saw moderate activity, trending mostly 50-cents lower, but with some good-grading the stock called 75-cents to $1.00 off.

Cows were termed steady, again in moderately active trade.

Lincoln Teachers Get 7.62% Raise

Lincoln Public Schools teachers will get a 7.62% average increase in pay and fringe benefits this fall.

The Board of Education agreed Tuesday to the increase for 1976-77 contracts. It amounts to approximately $1.3 million, the equivalent of three mills.

"We believe this is a good settlement," said Supt. John Prasch. Louis Roper, board president, said it "seems to be equitable for both sides."

Exact costs for parts salary and fringe benefit values will be revealed Wednesday during final negotiations with the Lincoln Education Association. Basic pay would move from $8,415 to about $8,800 for a beginning teacher with a bachelors degree and no experience.

Prasch said the $424,863 fringe package will be boosted by about 30%, enough to allow benefit options beyond the 23% increase in Blue Cross-Blue Shield insurance premiums. Single cost will move from $16.30 to $19.89 monthly, and family from $41.30 to $50.86.

Calling the settlement terms "productive," Prasch noted teacher concerns about items not negotiated will be addressed by joint study committees responsive to the LEA.

Both the association and board must ratify the pact later.

Yet to be decided are pay proposals by non-teaching and support staff members. The Teacher Aide Association Tuesday requested a $101,500 salary budget increase, overtime rates, improved staff development and fringe benefits.

Operation and maintenance department employes asked the board for overtime pay, improved death, emergency and vacation leaves, travel reimbursements, increased monthly amounts for fringe benefits, and raises from $4.38 to $5.40 hourly.

In other business, the board:

— Authorized national access to the East High "Learning Community School" if the federal government validates the innovative project as a demonstration model.

— Informally agreed Prasch should seek bids on a Prescott Elementary playground improvement project, including landscaping, a track and playing field backstops. Approval would come later. More work proposed could depend on closing S. 20th in front of the school.

— Accepted two State Education Department mini-grants totalling $2,805 for elementary language and senior high media production courses.

— Agreed to hold meetings with parents in all 46 schools in three-hour sessions May 6, 13 and 20, each at 7 p.m.

— Sanctioned the Special Education Advisory Committee as a formal body, officially recognizing its work and board input. Parents and agencies will be represented in coordinating programs for handicapped children, communicating needs and lobbying.

— Agreed to study an idea to train the hard-core jobless through the Opportunities Industrialization Center.

— Allowed Axel C. Bolleson, 544 Lyncrest Drive, to plant trees on Eastridge Elementary property.

School Reading Programs Said Successful

A majority of students in an individual-progress reading program surpassed their expected achievement, the Lincoln Board of Education was told Tuesday.

But Board President Louis Roper worried aloud that the public schools "rely on system managers rather than teachers."

If the System One reading program is a crutch instead of a tool, he said, that's a "turn for the worse."

Board members Jo Ann Maxey and Lu Pansing expressed concern that self-paced learning programs isolate students, who they maintained should get more teacher attention.

Dwight Grandgenett, reading consultant, said that concerns him too. But he and Ron Brandt, associate superintendent for instruction, pointed out that most students in System One Reading Labs learn better, with more comprehension.

Sixty per cent made as much or more reading growth than expected, based on pre-test comparative scores, Grandgenett said. And 90% of them "had a positive attitude" toward the lab.

The System One program allows a teacher to set out individually for each student the material to be learned, its difficulty and the learning rate. Labs are used in 13 elementary schools and seven secondary schools, and include almost 400 objectives that can be mastered.

An evaluation of System One at Lincoln High, Lincoln East, Everett, Goodrich, Irving, Lefler and Whittier also showed positive results in six of the labs: students read an average of 11 library books and completed an average of 1.3 objectives weekly.

As students increased the number of objectives mastered, their reading growth scores also went up. Teachers spent an average of 3.5 hours weekly to maintain the program after school hours.

Grandgenett said System One will expand next year to Culler, Pound and Lincoln Northeast. Future plans include peer tutoring and the training of substitute lab teachers.

The board deferred action on a learning disabilities policy statement, which in part would allow a school to offer its own substitute program.

School Speed Zone Idea Rejected By Task Force

A citizens committee which wants motorists to watch out for children walking to school has concluded that reduced speed limits aren't the answer.

Monday night a 13-member task force rejected the Lincoln Alliance's proposal to put in 15-miles-per-hour speed zones around elementary and junior high schools.

The recommendation will be forwarded to Mayor Helen Boosalis, who asked the special committee to study the proposal.

The mayor said Tuesday she plans to meet with the committee before making a final decision, which is not expected for several weeks.

The task force rejected the Alliance's propopsal to institute reduced speed zones on a 9 to 4 vote. Six members of the committee were from the mayor's School Crossing Protection Committee. The remaining seven were citizens representing the Lincoln Alliance.

Members of the Alliance, which is composed of 32 organizations, believed lower speed limits would reduce accidents.

However, statistics showed that pedestrian related accidents in Lincoln weren't happening around the schools.

A check with 35 other communities revealed the only way those cities could get drivers to slow down around schools was rigid enforcement by police. A majority on the task force agreed that the Lincoln Police Department could spend its time on more serious problems.

The task force also indicated that reduced speed zones might create a false sense of security among students and parents alike.

A better way to control traffic is through the use of traffic signals located near the schools, said Rick Haden of the city traffic engineering staff.

"It is easier to get the driver to stop for a red light," he said.

Group Asks To Aid Alcohol Plan

The fledgling Nebraska Task Force on Women, Alcohol and Drug Problems hopes to have more say on alcohol services for women at the ground level.

The group plans to ask the state alcoholism advisory council to create a subcommittee of task force members to oversee women's interests regarding alcohol abuse.

The task force will request time for its appeal at the advisory council's May 5 meeting.

The decision to work with the state advisory council was made at the suggestion of Dr. William Ford, state alcoholism director, who met with the task force Tuesday.

The task force wants to help draft the state alcoholism plan for 1977, which will be submitted to the state advisory council in mid-May. Final action is expected on the plan by July 1.

The woman alcoholic has not been singled out as a target population for development of alcoholism services, Ford told task force members. A bill recently passed by the U.S. Senate however, requires state rehabilitation plans to consider the woman alcoholic.

Lincoln Firm Says Union Discriminates

M. W. Anderson Construction Co. of Lincoln has filed a pair of complaints against Cement Masons Local 22 alleging that union members refused to work for a black foreman.

After learning of the complaints, the union's business representative Jack Walls said he had "no idea why the complaints were filed."

Later he suggested that maybe the reason cement masons refused to work with the forman was not because he was black but because he is not a union member.

The Anderson company filed suit Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Omaha and released a copy of an Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) complaint.

The EEOC complaint states in part: "The union has indicated that if M. W. Anderson removed its black cement foreman, the union would furnish men; otherwise they will not."

Cement foreman for the construction company is Claude McHolmes, who has been with the firm nearly 25 years, Anderson said.

He admitted the complaint goes "much deeper" than the discrimination charge. "This is something of long standing," he said.

The suit seeks $4,000 for damages and delay on projects, Anderson said, including "disruption of the men's morale."

McHolmes paid union initiation dues about a year ago, Walls recalled, "but that's as far as it went."

Union bylaws provide for a $50 fine if a union member works with a nonunion member, he pointed out.

"I don't know the full dtails," he said. "But this could be the reason my men refused to work" with McHolmes.

McHolmes was not immediately available for comment.

To Your Good Health:

Neuralgia Treatment Limited To Curbing Pain

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For a few years I have suffered from intermittent attacks of trigeminal neuralgia. My doctor can offer no hope except deadening of the facial nerves, which I would rather not do.

I am wondering whether riding a motorcycle or snowmobile in the wind would have an effect on this condition. I am a farmer and must do a lot of outside work. I would be interested in your suggestiors, especially as to any new drugs available to alleviate these sharp jabs of pain. Could the condition be caused by ill-fitting teeth?—D.W.

In this, the pain is triggered by irritation of the trigeminal nerve, which is one of a series of cranial nerves serving the head area. Usually, one side of the face is involved, most often the lips and nose, and sometimes the tongue and gums.

The cause is unknown, so treatment is limited to reducing the pain. The pain can be brought on by various events — washing the face, exposure to cold, for examples. It is quite likely that vibration from the motorcycle as well as the wind factor involved in riding can trigger the pain. So can ill-fitting dentures.

None of these factors makes the actual problem (also called "tic douloureux") worse. They merely bring on the symptoms.

There are several drugs used to lessen pain, and they include carbamazepine and diphenylhydantoin sodium. These are not "new" drugs. I'm not aware of any new drugs developed for this problem.

You may have to resort to nerve-blocking or other surgery, which can provide relatively longer periods of relief. Sorry to say, though, the effect, even of surgery, may wear off with time.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you please write something on ankylosing spondylitis? Is this at all related to Huntington's chorea? — E.C.

This is a form of arthritis that affects the spine. It is not related at all to Huntington's chorea, which is a disease of the nervous system.

Ankylosing spondylitis is very similar to common rheumatoid arthritis except that it does not permanently involve other joints. Other areas can be affected, but only transiently. Another name for it is Marie-Strumpell spondylitis. It affects men chiefly (approximately 90% of cases).

Typically, it beings in the lower back at the sacroiliac joints, then gradually ascends to involve the entire spine, with the chief symptoms being pain and stiffness.

As it progresses upward it causes a forward curvature so that the patient stands humped. The term "ankylosing" means a fusing with resulting immobility. "Spondylitis" means an inflammation of vertebrae. Side and forward bending of the spine is impaired.

Treatment is essentially the same as for rheumatoid arthritis. Early treatment is essential and efforts to control the forward stooping is important, either through exercise or special braces.

In long-neglected cases, surgery may compensate for some of the spinal distortion.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband, who is 48, had a check-up recently, and his blood pressure readings were 142-140-136 (systolic) at three different readings. But his diastolic reading was about 90. I am concerned. All my life I thought the diastolic (last figure in a blood pressure reading) was okay if it was 80. — Mrs. A.B.

Readings can vary quite widely. Your husband's pressure (both figures) is good for his age. Pressure tends to rise slightly with age in normal persons.

The first number in the reading refers to the pressure exerted in the blood vessels at the instant the heart pumps. The second is the pressure at the momentary resting stage between beats.

There are some misconceptions about blood pressure — for example, that the normal pressure should be 100-plus at your age. This is not always true, although in some cases it can work out that way.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters.

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

A child is born neither shy nor stubborn.

Shyness develops slowly. The Nebraska Medical Association reports that shyness grows as the result of exaggeration on the part of parents and others.

Shyness commands a great amount of attention. The child lets shyness become characteristic because he is often looked upon as a sensitive or nervous child and receives sympathy.

Shyness often develops when parents try to force a child into excessive sociability. The child develops the trait in order to attain sympathy.

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that it is as illogical to push a quiet child into being gregarious, as it is to push a thin child to eat more just to become stocky. One upsets a digestive system. The other produces emotional upset usually resulting in shyness.

—Colleen Nider, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The manager of the Chief Restaurant said your purse was mailed C.O.D. to you around April 12. You should have received it by now. He added he was sorry for the delay.

Movie Lights

I've had trouble locating a movie light bulb for my Autoload 309 Bell & Howell camera. Suppliers tell me the original DWA bulb is no longer made. What can I do?

—G. K., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Bill Larken, product manager at the Photo Products Group headquarters of Bell and Howell in Chicago, says the bulb was discontinued due to the human burn potential of the 650-watt bulb. Underwriters Laboratories apparently forced the discontinuance. A 250-watt bulb is available from suppliers. To compensate for reduced illumination, Larken recommends the use of high-speed film for indoor shooting only since high-speed film tends to take on a grainy, almost out of focus texture outdoors.

Two Floors Converted To Efficiencies

St. John's, Antigua (UPI) — The two upper floors of the 18th century copper and lumber store at historical Nelson's Dockyard in English Harbor are being converted into 13 efficiency apartments. The restoration of the building has retained its original ballast-brick exterior and altered the interior only enough to provide modern amenities. English Harbor, once the base of Adm. Horatio Nelson, was home port for the British Caribbean fleet during the 18th and 19th centuries.

NU Facilities Part Of Hassle

Sports Signals

By Bob Owens
Star Sports Editor

When your school's swimming and diving team finishes last in the Big Eight Conference for five consecutive years there certainly is something wrong with the program. That's the easy criticism. Fire the coach and everything will be all right.

That is, in effect, what some members of Coach John Reta's 1976 Cornhusker team said Monday when they publicly criticized him. Let's examine the problem.

I feel qualified to discuss a swimming program and what makes it tick because I covered Indiana University swimming for 15 years before heading for Nebraska. The situation there is similar in many respects to the one here.

First of all, Indiana had a dingy, dark, poor facility. Indiana had never so much as even won a Big Ten Conference swimming championship. That usually was won by Michigan.

Since 1961, Indiana hasn't lost a Big Ten title and has won six NCAA championships. Why? For one thing, three years prior to winning its first conference crown, a bright, new pool was opened.

Recruiting became easier for Coach Jim "Doc" Counsilman. You may say he's one of the best, which he is, but he had no reputation when he became coach. In fact, some school administrators had their own candidates and didn't want him.

Big Eight Blanked

Doc went to work and started winning as soon as his recruiting efforts began paying off. So will John Reta if he's given the same opportunity — adequate number of scholarships and adequate money to recruit. But he won't do it with Nebraskans. Counsilman didn't do it with Hoosiers.

Despite the fact that Indiana has twice the population of Nebraska, very, very few swimmers who were products of Indiana high schools became world class. I can name only one. Can you name a native Nebraskan who became an Olympic swimming champion?

Most of Counsilman's champions came from California or Illinois or Michigan, three of the nation's most populous states. That's where Nebraska is going to have to get its future champions.

In fact, the whole Big Eight suffers from a lack of world class swimmers. How many points did the conference score in the recent NCAA meet? How many points did it score in last year's NCAA meet? The answer in both cases is zero.

The Big Eight area just isn't one that produces great swimmers in great numbers. Perhaps the reason is population, or perhaps the lack of good age group and high school programs. The problem just isn't only in Nebraska.

Colorado Top Prep State

A year ago, Colorado produced the best overall group of swimmers from states in which Big Eight universities are located. Yet, the Buffaloes finished fifth in this year's conference meet.

Nebraska had only two best performances in a mythical high school meet involving Big Eight states. Both were relay teams. Colorado would have won the meet with 53 points. Other finishes: 2. Missouri 51; tie for third between Nebraska and Oklahoma, 40 each; 5. Kansas 38; 6. Iowa 36.

Ironically, Iowa State won this year's conference swim title, but the Cyclones have a facility that was good enough to host the NCAA meet in 1971 and their recruiting has been about 50-50 from out of state.

Only 19 high schools in Nebraska scored points in the state meet this season. Very few age group programs exist in the state. That's where great swimmers are made — not in college.

Population probably is the answer, and with Nebraska's winter weather, that problem probably never will be solved. The state has grown just slightly under a half million in 70 years.

California, which had more residents in 1900 than Nebraska has today (1,485,053 to 1,483,791) has brown to 18,468,081 (1970 census). The numbers game will be difficult to overcome.

Reta Replies To Accusations

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

The recent controversy between some members of the Nebraska swimming team and coach John Reta appears to have all the problems of a classic labor-management battle.

The swimmers, with the exception of one team member, met with Nebraska Athletic Director Bob Devaney Monday and presented a list of 15 points they said publicize the belief that "all is not peaches and cream," according to a team member.

But those points (or complaints) may not reach Reta because he refuses to meet with seniors chosen to speak for the team.

"The future of the team is not to be determined by seniors because they won't be around next year," Reta said.

The seniors are the spokesmen for the team because, said senior swimmer Scott Ruser, "we're afraid that if the underclassmen speak up there may be reprisals against them scholarship-wise, and we're just insuring against that happening. But 11 of the 12 team members support the team action."

Ruser, who said he is the main spokesman because he was the first one contacted, said that a number of the differences are subjective but that the team believes that "people should know that there are deficiencies in the swimming program at Nebraska.

"Our reasons are based on the fact our record is so poor and we've finished last in the Big Eight the past five years. There is a lack of trust between the team and Coach Reta," Ruser said.

One of the 15 points involved in the discussions with Devaney Monday was that "Reta offered full-ride scholarships two years ago to anyone on the team that finished in the top six in the Big Eight. One team member finished sixth in his event that year and didn't get a scholarship as promised," Ruser said.

Reta said the statement is only partially true. "We have through the years tried to give additional scholarship money to those individuals that finish in the top six in the Big Eight or go to the national meet, providing we have the scholarship to give. But that's the only condition, that we have money available."

Other concerns on the list question Reta's coaching techniques, his inability to recruit and keep Nebraska state champions on the team and his having a double standard for swimmers of different abilities.

Ruser said "that one guy comes to practice late and gets chewed out while a top swimmer comes to practice late and not much is said to him.

"Another point was that the better swimmers got more attention than others during practice."

"The good get chewed out along with the not-so-good," said Reta. "It's just that a good swimmer generally is the one that shows up for practice and on time."

Regarding other points on the list, Reta said, "I'm willing to stand on my record. I coached Lincoln Southeast to eight straight state championships and I feel we have improved consistently since I've been coaching here.

"This is a complicated situation, but in talking individually with the swimmers who will be returning next year I'm optimistic we can advance the program," Reta said.

"We have some excellent young swimmers who are willing to pay the price it takes to excel, and with the new facility in the Sports Center, we should be able to solve a lot of problems," Reta said.

"I recently showed a prospect from Indiana our old four-lane pool and then showed him the new one," Reta said. "And he said there wouldn't be any way he would come here if the old pool was all there was."

Reta described scheduling problems in the past because a number of teams, including Big Eight members, had said the Coliseum facility was dangerous due to poor lighting and poor markings.

"If we couldn't get opponents to come here, then that meant we had to travel to get meets and that meant budget problems," Reta said. "Also a more attractive home schedule helps recruiting because the better the competition the better the swimmers are in the long run."

Two former state champions were left off of this year's team because, according to Reta, "one was too irregular in attending practice and the other became scholastically ineligible.

"But we're looking to the future and we hope to get as many state champions as we can. This year's juniors in high school were the best to come down the pike in a long time and we hope to get as many of the top swimmers as we can," Reta said. "You can't go handing out scholarships on potential anymore because the money is so tight. But if a kid proves himself, he gets a reward, just like a walk-on in football or any other sport.

"I've been criticized through the years by individuals and my office is always open in case anybody has a complaint," said Reta. "There is no reason a kid can't come in and talk to me about a personal problem or something else. I just hope this thing gets cleared up soon, because the longer it goes on the more it hurts the program.

"Six years ago Kansas State dropped its swimming program because the coach felt he could not compete with the conference and recommended the program either be beefed up or dropped," said Reta. "Now there are three pools and a diving well unused because there is no intercollegiate swimming offered at K-State. I don't want to see that happen here."

In another side of the controversy, Devaney said he would not meet with the group of seniors. "There is no point in meeting with them since they won't be around next year," Devaney said Tuesday in a United Press International story. The story also said Devaney said he understood that those who complained about Reta concerning his ability to coach and recruit, were "unsuccessful swimmers" who expect too much of the coach.

Members of the team contacted Tuesday evening denied the goal was to have Reta removed.

No. Platte: Little Fishing

One of a Series
By TOM VINT
Outdoor Editor

North Platte — Fishing in this part of the country is in a temporary period of nonactivity. That goes all the way from the fishermen to the fish.

Tom Golden, bait shop operator at North Platte's Lake Maloney said not many fishermen were out, nor had they been. Lindy/Little Joe Tackle Co. fishing pro Gary Roach found out why. The fish weren't out either.

"This lake is almost barren," Roach said after fishing Maloney all day Monday. "These fish just aren't here right now. What I think they do is move up the canal system on either side of this lake."

Lake Maloney is part of the Tri-County Irrigation system and also feeds a power generating station just north of here. The inflow and outflow canals are running full at this time of year, if not of water, then certainly of fish, according to the 12-year fishing guide and pro.

"We fished this lake all day long, ran the graph locator and didn't find a fish," Roach said. "If they would have been in the main lake, we would have at least seen them somewhere.

"We ran water from 25 feet to two feet and nothing. We had two hits all day long and both of those came in the outflow canal area. The only thing I can figure is they have headed into the canals."

Monday was the first day Roach had been skunked on his tour through Nebraska. He had figured the big lakes, such as Harlan County Reservoir and Lake McConaughy (our next stop on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday) would be the most difficult fishing.

"I'm told by the biologists and the people around the lake that Maloney has good fish populations," Roach said. "You couldn't prove it by me but then we couldn't get a boat back into the canal systems either."

Monte Madsen, head of the District IV fisheries department, added another puzzling tidbit to Roach's no-fish dilemma.

"This had been a really strange year for our netting operations, too," Madsen said. The Game and Parks Commission uses Maloney as its walleye brood stock operation. Fishery biologists run nets into the lake during the spawning period to catch spawners, milk out the eggs, then hatch the eggs at the North Platte fish hatchery.

"Last year during the netting we took about 1,500 fish," Madsen said. "This year we only netted about 300. We're going to have to run nets at Lake McConaughy to fill all our hatchery orders for walleye eggs. It's been a real funny year and I can't quite explain what's happened."

Roach had an inkling the weather had a lot to do with the nonactivity of the fish.

"Just since I've been here the past week or so there have been cold fronts moving through almost every day, or so it seems," said the Brainerd, Minn., native. "There is nothing in this world which turns fish off more than the kind of weather patterns we've been having."

Still, Roach feels Maloney could be a very good summer walleye lake.

"If it's got the walleye numbers, and the people around here seem to think it does, then the lake should be real good during the summer," he said. "There are a ton of bait fish in the lake and that's a good sign.

"The lake structure is good for summer walleye, too," he added. "There are some good breaks from 12-18 foot water and a couple of sunken islands which should hold good numbers of fish in the summer. I'd like to be here then instead of now."

Apparently that's what the fish have been thinking, too. They aren't on the breaks now but as Roach said, "You can bet they'll be there in the summer."

Pair of Award Winners

Rain Delays NU, NWU Baseball

Rain forced the postponement of two local baseball doubleheaders, a softball game and three American Association baseball games.

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln doubleheader at Omaha with UNO has been rescheduled for 2 p.m. Wednesday. The twinbill between Nebraska Wesleyan and Dana at Blair has been re-set for Wednesday or Thursday afternoon, depending on the weather, at 2:30 p.m.

The Nebraska women's softball game with Tarkio was also postponed. No date was set for a game.

In the American Association, Denver at Tulsa and Evansville at Iowa were postponed due to rain and Indianapolis at Omaha was postponed due to cold weather.

Egan Fired; Nissalke In

HOUSTON (UPI) — Houston Rockets President and General Manager Ray Patterson Tuesday hired his Wisconsin buddy, much-traveled and controversial Tom Nissalke, to replace John Egan and coach the stagnant NBA team.

Patterson seized the chance to dump Egan when his three-year contract expired and grabbed Nissalke, a former charge he has wanted as his coach for many years.

Patterson coached Nissalke in high school at Wayland Academy in Beaver Dam, Wisc., and hired him in 1968 to be assistant coach of the NBA Milwaukee Bucks. The two have remained close even in the years their careers were separated.

"We've been friends for 25 years now," Nissalke said. "We've talked about everything for years. Ray is a guy who does not interfere. Any complaints he has he always talks them out."

Since 1972 Nissalke, 41, has stormed through four pro head coaching jobs. Most were successful and most set off sparks.

"We're fortunate to have Tom available at this time," Patterson said. Nissalke was working as a Bucks' scout after starting this season with the now-defunct Utah Stars.

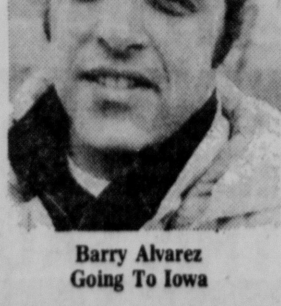
In a recent interview, Patterson said he would be the toughest boss Nissalke ever worked for.

"I've known him 30 years. I know every thing about him, and he knows a lot about the way I operate. For years we have talked on the phone about sensitive matters," he said.

Patterson was tough in his appraisal of Nissalke's move from the Milwaukee assistant job to the head coaching job of the ABA Dallas Chaparrals.

"For several seasons Tom got caught up with owners and general managers who wanted to coach," said Patterson, who often times this year loudly disagreed with Egan's game strategy.

Alvarez To Leave Lexington



Barry Alvarez
Going To Iowa

Lexington — Barry Alvarez, head football coach at Lexington High School the past two seasons, announced his resignation Tuesday to accept a similar position at Mason City, Iowa.

Finding it difficult to make a decision about leaving after his teams had compiled a 15-4 mark over his short tenure, Alvarez consulted University of Nebraska assistant coach John Melton since his recruiting duties cover that particular area.

"Coach Melton said the area was the best in the state of Iowa," Alvarez said. "He's the one who really helped me. He said I may never have another chance like this again.

"It's quite an emotional decision," added Alvarez, a former linebacker for Nebraska and assistant coach at Lincoln Northeast. "I must have changed my mind three times yesterday alone."

Alvarez says the town of 32,000 has just one public high school and the best physical plant he's ever seen.

"The funny thing was," he added. "I wasn't even looking for a job. The superintendent (former Lincolnite Roger Clough) called me and asked if I was interested and I said no. But eventually, he talked me into visiting the school.

"It's going to take a little rebuilding," Alvarez said. "It's not like when I stepped in here and was at the top already."

A successor to Alvarez is being sought, according to Lexington athletic director Ray Ehlers.

Westphal Peps Suns' Win

Phoenix, Ariz. (UPI) — Paul Westphal and Keith Erickson combined for 70 points to lead the Phoenix Suns to a 130-114 victory and a 3-1 advantage over Seattle Tuesday night in their NBA Western Conference semifinal playoff series.

Westphal scored 39 points, tying his high since joining the Suns at the start of this season. Erickson, a veteran forward, came off the bench to score 31 points.

Alvan Adams had 17, Ricky Sobers 14 and Gar Heard 11 for the Suns, who never trailed in the game, which was tied only once at 6-6.

Fred Brown, who started for the Supersonics in contrast to his usual sixth man role, had 33. Tom Burleson added 26.

The Suns led 60-47 at halftime after shooting 49 per cent from the floor to 45 per cent for Seattle. Brown managed only eight points in 21 minutes of the first half.

Phoenix sprinted to its largest lead of the night, 90-69, in the closing seconds of the third quarter as Westphal had 12 points and Erickson 10 for the period.

Game five of the best-of-seven series will be in Seattle Sunday afternoon.

Met Homers Spark Brawl

By The Associated Press

St. Louis may have won the beanball battle, but the New York Mets—with two-run homers from Felix Millan, Del Unser and John Milner—won the war Tuesday night 8-0.

The homers, all in the first two innings, touched off the battle between Cards starter Lynn McGlothen, 1-2 and the victim of all three homers, and New York left-hander Jon Matlack, 2-0. McGlothen and Cards Manager Red Schoendienst were ejected along with New York infielder Bud Harrelson.

McGlothen first struck Unser with a pitch in the third inning and, in turn, was brushed back by Matlack in the Cards' half of the inning. Plate umpire Bruce Froemming warned Matlack, who drew the automatic $50 fine.

Flyers Trounce Maple Leafs, 7-1

From News Wires

Don Saleski scored a hat trick including two goals in a 1:33 span of the second period, to lead the Philadelphia Flyers to a 7-1 rout of the Toronto Maple Leafs Tuesday night and a 3-2 advantage in their Stanley Cup quarterfinal playoff series.

The victory enabled the Islanders to bring the series home to Uniondale, N.Y., Thursday for the sixth game of the series.

New York 4, Buffalo 3

New York defenseman Bert Marshall scored his first goal of the season with 19 seconds left in the game to lift the Islanders to a 4-3 victory over the Buffalo Sabres and a 3-2 lead in their best-of-seven series.

The victory enabled the Islanders to bring the series home to Uniondale, N.Y., Thursday for the fifth game of the series.

With the contest tied 3-3 on an opposing pair of third-period goals, New York's Ed Westfall won a drw from Don Luce at the right faceoff circle. Andre St. Laurent chased the puck in back of the net and passed to Marshall at the left point. Marshall's shot sailed over the shoulder of Buffalo goalie Gerry Desjardins.

Boston 7, Los Angeles 1

Defenseman Brad Park, who underwent knee surgery less than seven weeks ago, scored two goals and assisted on two others in helping the Boston Bruins to a 7-1 victory over the Los Angeles Kings.

Park scored a short-handed goal and later on a power play as the Bruins took a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven quarter-final series. The sixth game is scheduled for Los Angeles Thursday night.

The Bruins spotted Los Angeles a 1-0 lead on Marcel Dionne's power play goal at 6:39 of the first period before storming back in sultry Boston Garden.

Don Marcotte tied the score on a 20-footer at 17:41. Then Boston broke the game wide open with four goals in the second period and two more in the finale.

Bobby Schmautz put Boston in front 2-1 with a goal on a perfect pass from Jean Ratelle in the opening minute of the middle period.

Warriors Smash Pistons In Opener

Oakland (UPI) — Phil Smith scored 15 of his game-high 26 points in a decisive second period and the defending champion Golden State Warriors crushed the Detroit Pistons 127-103 in the opener of their NBA playoff series Tuesday night.

The best-of-seven Western Conference semi-final continues here Thursday night. The Warriors are 6-0 against Detroit this season.

Detroit bolted to an early 18-12 lead, but the Warriors never trailed after a 12-0 spree gave them a 24-18 bulge with 3:49 to go in the opening period.

Guard Charles Dudley came off the bench and scored four of those 12 points and had seven as Golden State showed a 34-31 lead entering the second quarter.

NBA All-Star Smith then took over and helped the Warriors outscore the Pistons 31-20 for a 65-51 lead at margin at the half. Reserve forward Derrek Dickey also played a key role in the quarter, scoring five points in a 7-0 spree that gave Golden State breathing room.

The onslought continued in the second half, with the Warriors doing a fine defensive job and preventing the Pistons from penetrating.

Ball-hawking Golden State had a total of 14 steals, guard Charles Johnson leading the way with four.

Rick Barry was off-target on his shooting, contributing only 13 points, but the Warriors' leader compensated with a game-high 14 assists.

Detroit's most serious threat in the second half came on a string of seven straight points that cut the Warriors' lead to 101-88 with 7:48 to go in the game.

Charles Johnson then scored four points in an 8-0 binge that made it 109-88 with 5:39 remaining.

Center Bob Lanier paced the Pistons with 18 points and also grabbed a game-high 16 rebounds. Jamaal Wilkes added 16 points for the winners.

Many To Lose Food Stamps

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — There s no question but that more than one million people soon will be thrown off the food-stamp program President Ford has a list of administrative changes ready to go into effect June 1, unless Congress pre-empts him with a bill of its own The congressional bill is not as draconian as the President s plan which would cut 5 3 million persons out of the program but is still aimed at cutting the rolls by 1 4 million persons

It s too early to know for sure to what extent Congress will change Ford s program (the Senate has passed its version but the House is still holding hearings) Furthermore, when the new regulations go into effect June 1 they will immediately be challenged as illegal by the New York based Food Research and Action Center But my associate Anne Wolman has been investigating the changes under way and it appears that when the dust settles the following groups will be most affected

— People whose way of life approached middle class but are undergoing a financial reversal Today a family of four can get food stamps if their net income is no more than $553 a month ($6 636 a year)

In figuring net income,' they can deduct from their wages a number of basic expenses such as taxes babysitting if the mother works certain medical costs tuition and sometimes even a portion of rent mortgage payments and utilities This gives some families making $8,000 to $9 000 limited aid from food stamps

But after June 1 there will be a flat $100 deduction ($125 if you re 65 or over) This will have the effect of ruling out people whose income is above the poverty level, but whose basic expenses leave them genuinely poor if their income suddenly stops

A family of four won t be able to get food stamps if its monthly income, after the $100 deductible is more than $458 a month $5 500 a year) The intent is to prevent people with higher incomes from benefiting from a program meant for the poor But the effect is to withhold help from people who on a temporary basis should probably have it

— The very poor These people rarely have many expenses that qualify as deductions under present rules, so the flat $100 or $125 deduction will improve their position

— The working poor Those whose incomes hover above the poverty line may lose quite a bit The basic eligibility level for everyone will be set exactly at the official poverty line whereas at present some 26% of food-stamp families exceed that limit (though generally not by much)

Aside from this sizable cut in food benefits a twist in the President s program has this socially disastrous result of the people who qualify for food stamps those on welfare will have more disposable income than those who work That s because income is evaluated on exactly the same basis whether it comes from a paycheck or from public assistance

A family of four with a net income from either source of say $400 a month would qualify for the same amount of stamps However the working family has to pay income taxes and Social Security taxes which the welfare family does not So the welfare family winds up with more money

Fortunately the bill passed in the Senate allows the working poor to deduct taxes separately, and raises their flat deduction to $125 This encourages them to stay on the job rather than quit and go on welfare

The administration opposes this approach, because it costs more money But if we are to have any hope of digging out of the welfare morass, we must stop designing systems that make it smarter to live on welfare than accept a low-paid job

GNP Figures Spark Rise In Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took a second look at the Gross National Product figures for this year and surged sharply and broadly higher Tuesday

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks shot up 15 35 points to close at 1 003 46, its highest close since it finished at 1 004 09 on April 5

The advance spread throughout the market during the day, with rising New York Stock Exchange issues taking a 12-3 lead on those declining And the exchange s composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 80 to 54 76

The 7 5 per cent annual growth rate of the nation s output of goods and services in the first three months of the year, announced Monday by the Commerce Department, was better than many investors had anticipated

"Those figures answered some of the fears the market had concerning the durability of the recovery ' analyst Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp said

Polaroid was the Big Board s most active issue, jumping more than four points in price

Analysts said the announcement removed constraints on buying Polaroid stock which some thought to be well-priced

First National Corp. Tells Dip In Net Income

First National Lincoln Corp has reported a 12 4% decline in net income in the first three months of 1976 compared to the first quarter of 1975 This means a reduction of $1 38 per share to $1 21

Chairman of the Board, Burnham Yates said the net income decline resulted from a decrease in the level of interest rates on loans and investments and an increase in operating expenses

Yates cited the new banking facility at 56th and O and two new computer data collection centers as accounting for most of the increase in operating expenses

Large Run Depresses Hog Prices

OMAHA, Neb (AP)—A large run sent hog prices lower on the Omaha livestock market Tuesday, while cattle also lost ground

The day's hog run was estimated at about 7,200 head, which was well above the advance estimates

The trade on barrows and gilts was active Opening sales trended from $1 50-to-$1 75 lower, but closing sales were termed $1 00-to-$1 50 off

The cattle run was also on the large side, being estimated at about 6 500 head

Slaughter steers opened slow, but turned moderately active during later trading rounds Choice steers trended 50-to-75 cents lower, with other classes called unevenly weak to 50-cents lower

Heifers saw moderate activity, trending mostly 50-cents lower, but with some good-grading the stock called 75-cents to $1 00 off

Cows were termed steady, again in moderately active trade

Morning Briefing

Johnson Renews KC Pact

Phil Johnson
Salary Increase

Kansas City Kings basketball coach Phil Johnson accepted a new one-year contract that includes a salary increase.

Johnson, who first coached the Kings Nov. 29 1973, has a 102-120 record, a .460 winning percentage. The contract offer was made unanimously by the Kings' 11-man board of directors.

Other Basketball

Kent Benson, Indiana's 6-11 all-American center, said he turned down a lucrative offer from the Atlanta Hawks and asked coach Bobby Knight to get the pros "off my back."

The Indiana-Ohio college All-Star basketball game will have a very familiar look to it. The five starters on the NCAA championship Indiana team will be on the Hoosier team.

Indiana coach Bobby Knight pinned a red "Indiana No. 1" button on President Ford as he greeted the Indiana team in the White House Rose Garden before taking them on a tour of the Oval Office.

Ten demonstrators were ejected from an American-Soviet Union basketball game in Indianola, Ia., after protesting the treatment of Jews in Russia.

The president of the University of Nevada at Las Vegas confirmed that the NCAA is officially investigating the school's basketball program. Dr. Donald Baeppler said about half the questions relate to the three years that coach Jerry Tarkanian has been guiding the Rebels.

Darrel Griffith, Parade magazine's choice as the top prep basketball player in the nation, said he signed a national letter of intent with the University of Louisville. There was speculation that Griffith, a 6-4 forward, would forego college and turn pro.

The new Seattle American League baseball team is sponsoring a name-the-team contest. Grand prize is two season tickets and an expense-paid trip to an AL city on the West coast during the first season of play.

Entries, including a 23-word explanation of why the name is appropriate, should be sent to: Name The Team, Seattle Professional Baseball, care of Kaye-Smith Enterprises at 2212 Fourth Ave., Seattle, 98121. Deadline is May 31.

The Seattle Kingdome may get a halo. King County officials favor illuminating the exterior of the dome at night, but funds are not available at this time.

James "Lou" Gorman, the No. 2 man in the Kansas City Royals organization, was named director of baseball operations for Seattle's new team. The Royals promoted John Schuerholz into Gorman's job of director of scouting and player development.

Football

Florida A&M University announced it has taken disciplinary action against athletic director Hansel E. Tookes and said his football team has been barred from appearing on NCAA-controlled telecasts this season. The action was taken because Tookes allowed last December's Orange Blossom Classic football game with Kentucky State to be telecast without NCAA approval.

Percy Penn, a football official for the Southwest Conference, has filed a $1 million libel suit against Tulsa Tribune sports editor Bob Hartzell for statements in a column last September about his officiating at the Tulsa-Arkansas football game.

Eddie Sheets, a linebacker for the WFL Florida Blazers in 1974 and former Kansas player, signed with the Washington Redskins.

Baseball

Jim Slaton, who finished last season with eight straight losses, started this season on the right track, pitching two shutouts and being named as the season's first American League player of the week.

A three-judge California District Court of Appeals panel will hear oral arguments from lawyers for Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley, who wants Catfish Hunter back, and from Hunter's side. Finley has declared he'll take the case all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

Hockey

Clarence Campbell, NHL president, said violence in the sport may lead to "booking" of players as is done in soccer. An official in the stands watches for general misconduct and can recommend punishment if it is needed.

Campbell was one of five men charged by a justice of the peace in Ottawa with defrauding the Canadian government in connection with a stock transaction.

Winger Hank Nowak suffered a 25-stitch cut on his left hand in the second period of the Boston Bruins-Los Angeles Kings playoff game.

Other Sports

Center Bobby Clarke of the Philadelphia Flyers has been named the National Hockey League's player of the year for the third time in four years by the Sporting News. Members of the all-star team include: left wing Bill Barber of the Flyers; right wing Guy Lafleur of Montreal; defensemen Denis Potvin of the New York Islanders and Brad Park of Boston and goalie Ken Dryden of Montreal. Central Bryan Trottier of the Islanders was named NHL Rookie of the Year.

The Indianapolis Speedway said 70 cars, nine more than last year, will challenge for the 33 starting places in the "500" May 30.

Marty Sudzina, 24, an unemployed steel worker from Duquesne, Pa., won the 26-mile marathon that is the initial event of the 82nd annual Penn Relays. Over 190 runners were entered in the race but only 133 started, with temperatures in the high 80s, and only 48 finished.

The possibility of Muhammad Ali facing Ken Norton in a world heavyweight title fight in the Cleveland area in September is "very, very bright," according to promoter Don King.

Five of Japan's top female bowlers will attempt to steal the show when the richest prize in the history of women's bowling goes up for grabs in the $86,000 Women's World Invitational. Bowlers representing the Philippine Islands, Mexico, Canada, Germany, Austria and Venezuela are also entered along with the top American pro tour ladies.

Oakland Raiders' defensive back George Atkinson was acquitted of bank embezzlement-larceny charges by a federal jury.

Baltimore (UPI) — Slugger Reggie Jackson, saying "a man has got to do what he's got to do," has given the Baltimore Orioles two days to sign him or he will sit out the season and play for another team next year, it was reported Tuesday.

The Baltimore Evening Sun quoted Jackson as saying in a telephone interview that he had two long telephone negotiating sessions with Orioles' general manager Hank Peters, but that no progress was made.

Peters confirmed that he has talked "at length" with Jackson and his agent, Gary Walker, and that nothing was decided, except to talk some more.

"We're still trying to work something out," said Peters, who added he has no confirmed plans to go to Arizona, where Jackson is staying, or the West Coast.

It has been reported that Jackson wants a five-year, $3 million contract. He told the Evening Sun that the Orioles have not changed their original offer, which has not been disclosed.

"Nobody has changed the numbers," he told Evening Sun sportswriter Michael Janofsky.

After both dugouts were warned, McGlothen renewed the battle by brushing back Matlack in the fourth and then hitting his pitching rival with a 3-0 delivery.

Outfielder Dave Kingman led a charge from the New York bench, but order was quickly restored after Froemming banished McGlothen and Schoendienst.

Big 8 Track Tickets Set

LINCOLN, Neb (AP) — Tickets for the 1976 Big Eight track and field championships are on sale, according to Bob Devaney, Nebraska athletic director. The championships will take on an Olympic look at Nebraska's Ed Weir stadium because all events except the mile relay and the 440 relay will be metric rather than measured in yards.

Tickets for the May 14 preliminaries will be $3 for general admission.

Brandt Has Buying Spree At Oaklawn

Omaha — Louis Brandt went on a buying spree at the recently completed Oaklawn Park race meeting.

With more than $160,000 in new purchases complementing an already powerful stable, Brandt has arrived at Ak-Sar-Ben aiming for some of the more than $5,000,000 in purses.

Construction of a new grandstand at the Nebraska State Fairgrounds in Lincoln will not be completed until 1977. So, Ak-Sar-Ben will host 75 days of racing this year — 60 days starting next Tuesday through July 17 for the regular Ak-Sar-Ben meeting, and 15 days, July 20-August 7 for the Fairgrounds.

Brandt's most expensive claim at Oaklawn was Avdee, a three-year-old gelding taken for Douglas County Assessor Frank Bemis for $25,000. Avdee moved in to the allowance ranks and won one race and finished second once to earn $9,100 for Bemis.

Bemis also had two other horses win at Oaklawn — Bourre Padnah and Kim's Lad.

Brandt spent more than $75,000 for Mr. and Mrs. William Rice's Dazoc Stable of Cozad. The claims included I'd Rather Walk, $22,500; Perfect Dear, $20,000; Greg Ness, $15,000; and Amazing May, $10,000.

The Rices also have an outstanding three-year-old filly in Roger's Choice. She won her only two starts of 1975 here at Ak-Sar-Ben. At Oaklawn, she added two victories in five starts.

Habitat Law Protested

By The Associated Press

An effort to repeal the new wildlife habitat preservation law, which is funded through increased hunting and fishing fees, is being mounted by a southeast Nebraska citizens' committee.

Secretary of State Allen Beermann a sample petition in preparation for a drive to win repeal through a voter referendum next November.

The committee is headed by chairman Robert H. Miller and co-chairman Bruce Stockdale, both of Falls City. Guy Cooper of Humboldt delivered the sample petition and committee formation data to Beermann Monday.

"The attorney general and I reviewed it this morning and sent it (the sample petition) back with three technical corrections," Beermann said.

"So it will go back to them to make final additions or corrections so it will be in form for me to approve and then they can begin circulating," he added.

After approval of the petitions' form, circulators must gather 22,566 valid signatures of registered voters, which represents 5 per cent of the total vote for governor in the last gubernatorial election.

The signatures must also meet the requirement of being 5 per cent of the gubernatorial vote in two-fifths of Nebraska's counties, or 38 of them.

If those initiative referendum requirements are met within 90 days of the Unicameral session's end and 30 days before the general election, the issue of whether to repeal the measure will go before the voters.

The Nebraska electorate then decides whether to repeal the measure or let the handiwork of the Unicameral stand.

The Committee For the Repeal of the Bill 861 seeks to strike down a measure that roughly doubles hunting and fishing fees in the state.

Among the increases in that bill is the hike for hunting of upland game birds, creating a "habitat stamp" and boosting the fee from $1 to $7.50.

The additional $2.4 million raised by the habitat stamp and other fee hikes would be used by the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission to preserve existing wildlife habitat and encourage farmers to create new habitat areas.

Nets, Colonels Set Pace

By The Associated Press

If the Doctor and the Bird keep doing their things, then it'll probably be the New York Nets and the Kentucky Colonels in the American Basketball Association finals.

The Doctor, of course, is Julius Erving, the league's first three-time Most Valuable Player. He was most valuable for New York on both ends of the court Tuesday night.

First he scored 32 points. Then he kept San Antonio from scoring two with five seconds to play. He blocked a Mike Gale shot and secured the Nets' 110-108 victory that gave New York a 3-2 lead over the Spurs in their best-of-seven semifinal series. The Nets can move into the finals by winning Wednesday night in San Antonio.

The Bird, of course, is Bird Everitt. His first name is William, but that's only a technicality. The Bird was flying high Tuesday night in Louisville, scoring 40 points in the Colonels' 126-114 victory over Denver, the ABA's defending champions.

It gave Kentucky a 2-1 semifinal lead over the Nuggets, and the Colonels can put the pressure on even more by taking the fourth game Wednesday night at home.

"I just hope we can maintain our tough mental attitude," Kentucky Coach Hubie Brown said. Denver Coach Larry Brown thinks his Nuggets won't fold up in the critical fourth game. "We have some people who respond to challenges," he said. "We've just got to come back Wednesday night."

San Antonio has to come back, too, or it'll be eliminated from the playoffs. Spurs General Manager John Begzos has been talking up a storm to intensify fan interest—and the talking he's been doing has Nets Coach Kevin Loughery hopping mad. Begzos has aimed a few barbs at New York forward Rich Jones,

G&P's Bailey Irked By Group's Action

By The Associated Press

Bill Bailey, acting director of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission, said Tuesday an effort to repeal the new habitat stamp law is aimed at scuttling a needed program.

"We feel that this is a step in the right direction; it was strongly supported by the commission," Bailey said in support of LB861, the Unicameral-passed measure the would increase hunting and fishing fees in Nebraska to upgrade wildlife habitat.

"Obviously, it was not a small measure by any means," Bailey said. "The increases were fairly substantial and we felt that if we were going to do anything at all, it had to be a substantial program."

A citizens' committee from the Falls City area has filed sample petitions with the secretary of state in preparation for a drive to win repeal of LB861 through a voter referendum, an action that Bailey said took him by surprise.

"I knew that there was opposition in the Falls City area," he said, "but I didn't know it was to the entire bill. I thought it was to the increase in the non-resident fishing fees."

Bailey said he expects continued strong support from commission members and indicated there may be an effort to put the commission on record as opposing the drive. He said the matter will be reviewed at next weeks's commission meeting.

NWU Cage, Mat Schools Slated

Nebraska Wesleyan will host basketball and wrestling schools this summer on the NWU campus.

Plainsmen basketball coach Irv Peterson will direct four cage schools assisted by Lincoln Northeast coach Ed Johnson and Fullerton coach Kim Busch. The program will offer four schools for different age groups running from June 10 to July 16. The progrm is available for both boys and girls and features all aspects of basketball. Further information may be obtained by contacting Irv Peterson, NWU Basketball Summer Schools Director, Nebraska Wesleyan University, Lincoln, 68504.

Plainsmen wrestling coach Ron Bachman will direct one school for grapplers age 8-15 and not in high school, July, 19-23. Lincoln Northeast coach John McIntyre and Lincoln East coach Jim Holecek will assist in the school that features introduction to wrestling, skill improvement and other aspects of the sport. More information may be obtained by contacting Summer Sports Director, NWU, Lincoln, 68504.

YCC Camps In Lincoln Area

Two of Nebraska's seven Youth Conservation Corps camps will be operating in the Lincoln area this summer, and young people wanting summer employment in the program must apply by May 1.

The YCC program offers those in the 15-to-18-year age group a combination of summer jobs and conservation education. Examples of work include tree planting, nature trail construction, maintenance work, and construction of recreation facilities.

Besides the camps in Lincoln, others are being operated in Omaha, McCook, Chadron, Scottsbluff, and Valentine.

The Youth Conservation Corps is sponsored by the U.S. Departments of Interior and Agriculture, and is coordinated in Nebraska by the Game and Parks Commission. Applicatin forms are available from Nebraska Job Service offices, high schools, affirmative action employment groups, and the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission.

Blair Ready For CU Wins

Boulder, Colo. (UPI) — Colorado's new basketball coach Bill Blair says he expects to be fired if he can't produce a winning team for the Big Eight school.

"The University of Colorado is going to put a lot of money into its basketball program and I'm not going to stay if they aren't," said Blair. "But nobody is going to waste money on me. If I don't win at Colorado, I'll be gone."

Blair, 34, was hired earlier this month to replace Russell "Sox" Walseth, who was fired in March. Blair's Virginia Military Institute team last season had a 22-10 record, the school's first winning season since 1941.

To Your Good Health:

Neuralgia Treatment Limited To Curbing Pain

By George C. Thosteson, M D.

Dear Dr Thosteson For a few years I have suffered from intermittent attacks of trigeminal neuralgia. My doctor can offer no hope except deadening of the facial nerves, which I would rather not do.

I am wondering whether riding a motorcycle or snowmobile in the wind would have an effect on this condition. I am a farmer and must do a lot of outside work. I would be interested in your suggestions, especially as to any new drugs available to alleviate these sharp jabs of pain Could the condition be caused by ill-fitting teeth?—D W

In this, the pain is triggered by irritation of the trigeminal nerve, which is one of a series of cranial nerves serving the head area Usually, one side of the face is involved, most often the lips and nose, and sometimes the tongue and gums

The cause is unknown, so treatment is limited to reducing the pain The pain can be brought on by various events — washing the face, exposure to cold, for examples It is quite likely that vibration from the motorcycle as well as the wind factor involved in riding can trigger the pain So can ill-fitting dentures

None of these factors makes the actual problem (also called tic douloureux) worse They merely bring on the symptoms

There are several drugs used to lessen pain, and they include carbamazepine and diphenylhydantoin sodium These are not "new' drugs I m not aware of any new drugs developed for this problem

You may have to resort to nerve-blocking or other surgery, which can provide relatively longer periods of relief Sorry to say though, the effect, even of surgery, may wear off with time

Dear Dr. Thosteson. Would you please write something on ankylosing spondylitis? Is this at all related to Huntington's chorea? — E.C.

This is a form of arthritis that affects the spine It is not related at all to Huntington's chorea, which is a disease of the nervous system

Ankylosing spondylitis is very similar to common rheumatoid arthritis except that it does not permanently involve other joints Other areas can be affected, but only transiently Another name for it is Marie-Strumpell spondylitis It affects men chiefly (approximately 90% of cases)

Typically, it beings in the lower back at the sacroiliac joints, then gradually ascends to involve the entire spine, with the chief symptoms being pain and stiffness

As it progresses upward it causes a forward curvature so that the patient stands humped The term "ankylosing" means a fusing with resulting immobility 'Spondylitis' means an inflammation of vertebrae Side and forward bending of the spine is impaired

Treatment is essentially the same as for rheumatoid arthritis Early treatment is essential and efforts to control the forward stooping is important, either through exercise or special braces

In long-neglected cases, surgery may compensate for some of the spinal distortion

Dear Dr. Thosteson· My husband, who is 48, had a check-up recently, and his blood pressure readings were 142-140-136 (systolic) at three different readings But his diastolic reading was about 90.

I am concerned All my life I thought the diastolic (last figure in a blood pressure reading) was okay if it was 80. — Mrs. A.B.

Readings can vary quite widely Your husband's pressure (both figures) is good for his age Pressure tends to rise slightly with age in normal persons

The first number in the reading refers to the pressure exerted in the blood vessels at the instant the heart pumps The second is the pressure at the momentary resting stage between beats

There are some misconceptions about blood pressure — for example, that the normal pressure should be 100-plus at your age This is not always true, although in some cases it can work out that way

☆ ☆ ☆

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

A child is born neither shy nor stubborn

Shyness develops slowly The Nebraska Medical Association reports that shyness grows as the result of exaggeration on the part of parents and others

Shyness commands a great amount of attention The child lets shyness become characteristic because he is often looked upon as a sensitive or nervous child and receives sympathy

Shyness often develops when parents try to force a child into excessive sociability The child develops the trait in order to attain sympathy

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that it is as illogical to push a quiet child into being gregarious, as it is to push a thin child to eat more just to become stocky One upsets a digestive system The other produces emotional upset usually resulting in shyness

Movie Lights

I've had trouble locating a movie light bulb for my Autoload 309 Bell & Howell camera Suppliers tell me the original DWA bulb is no longer made What can I do?

—G K, Lincoln

Two Floors Converted To Efficiencies

St John s Antigua (UPI) — The two upper floors of the 18th century copper and lumber store at historical Nelson s Dockyard in English Harbor are being converted into 13 efficiency apartments The restoration of the building has retained its original ballast-brick exterior and altered the interior only enough to provide modern amenities English Harbor, once the base of Adm Horatio Nelson was home port for the British Caribbean fleet during the 18th and 19th centuries

1974 Divorce Rate Highest Since WWII

Washington (UPI) — Nearly 2% of American married women got divorced in 1974, a record for U.S. divorce rates since World War II, a federal government study reported Tuesday.

The National Center for Health Statistics also said couples divorcing in 1974 had about 1,099,000 children under the age of 18 — a third straight year of decline in the average number of children involved in each divorce decree.

Although the number of men involved presumably would be the same, the center keeps and reports its divorce rate statistics in terms of the female partner.

It said the 1974 rate was 19.3 per 1,000 married women aged 15 or older.

The previous postwar peak was 17.9 per 1,000 in 1946, a year of social upheaval in which the strains of wartime separation took a heavy toll on American marriages.

In 1967, the year before divorces began escalating rapidly, the center said the rate was 11.2 per 1,000 married women.

The new report said the median length of marriages at time of divorce in 1974 was 6.5 years, down from 6.6 years in 1973 and 6.7 in 1972.

It said about 31% of the 1974 divorces involved marriages less than four years long.

It estimated that 17% of divorced men and 28% of divorced women in 1974 were under the age of 25, and that 41% of the men and 52% of the women were under 30.

In an earlier report that dealt with total numbers of divorces, the Census Bureau reported April 1 that divorces exceeded 1 million for the first time in American history in 1975 — the year after the period covered by the center's report on divorce rates.

Trucks Recalled

Detroit (AP) — General Motors Corp. said Tuesday it is recalling 479 current model Chevrolet and GMC medium-duty trucks to replace possibly defective nuts which could cause a loss of steering control.

GM said about 5% of the nuts, attached at the steering gear and power steering cylinder, could contain metal flaws.

July Festival Planned

New Orleans, La. (UPI) — The second annual France-Louisiana festival will be held in New Orleans from July 4 through July 14. The festival, part of the special bicentennial celebration, will begin with a series of events on Independence Day and end with Bastille Day observances on July 14.

Music news is covered thoroughly in the "Sunday Journal and Star.".

NU Facilities Part Of Hassle

When your school's swimming and diving team finishes last in the Big Eight Conference for five consecutive years there certainly is something wrong with the program. That's the easy criticism. Fire the coach and everything will be all right.

That is, in effect, what some members of Coach John Reta's 1976 Cornhusker team said Monday when they publicly criticized him. Let's examine the problem.

I feel qualified to discuss a swimming program and what makes it tick because I covered Indiana University swimming for 15 years before heading for Nebraska. The situation there is similar in many respects to the one here.

First of all, Indiana had a dingy, dark, poor facility. Indiana had never so much as even won a Big Ten Conference swimming championship. That usually was won by Michigan.

Since 1961, Indiana hasn't lost a Big Ten title and has won six NCAA championships. Why? For one thing, three years prior to winning its first conference crown, a bright, new pool was opened.

Recruiting became easier for Coach Jim "Doc" Counsilman. You may say he's one of the best, which he is, but he had no reputation when he became coach. In fact, some school administrators had their own candidates and didn't want him.

Big Eight Blanked

Doc went to work and started winning as soon as his recruiting efforts began paying off. So will John Reta if he's given the same opportunity — adequate number of scholarships and adequate money to recruit. But he won't do it with Nebraskans. Counsilman didn't do it with Hoosiers.

Despite the fact that Indiana has twice the population of Nebraska, very, very few swimmers who were products of Indiana high schools became world class. I can name only one. Can you name a native Nebraskan who became an Olympic swimming champion?

Sports Signals

By Bob Owens
Star Sports Editor

Most of Counsilman's champions came from California or Illinois or Michigan, three of the nation's most populous states. That's where Nebraska is going to have to get its future champions.

In fact, the whole Big Eight suffers from a lack of world class swimmers. How many points did the conference score in the recent NCAA meet? How many points did it score in last year's NCAA meet? The answer in both cases is zero.

The Big Eight area just isn't one that produces great swimmers in great numbers. Perhaps the reason is population, or perhaps the lack of good age group and high school programs. The problem just isn't only in Nebraska.

Colorado Top Prep State

A year ago, Colorado produced the best overall group of swimmers from states in which Big Eight universities are located. Yet, the Buffaloes finished fifth in this year's conference meet.

Nebraska had only two best performances in a mythical high school meet involving Big Eight states. Both were relay teams. Colorado would have won the meet with 53 points. Other finishes: 2. Missouri 51; tie for third between Nebraska and Oklahoma, 40 each; 5. Kansas 38; 6. Iowa 36.

Ironically, Iowa State won this year's conference swim title, but the Cyclones have a facility that was good enough to host the NCAA meet in 1971 and their recruiting has been about 50-50 from out of state.

Only 19 high schools in Nebraska scored points in the state meet this season. Very few age group programs exist in the state. That's where great swimmers are made — not in college.

Population probably is the answer, and with Nebraska's winter weather, that problem probably never will be solved. The state has grown just slightly under a half million in 70 years.

California, which had more residents in 1900 than Nebraska has today (1,485,053 to 1,483,791) has brown to 18,468,081 (1970 census). The numbers game will be difficult to overcome.

Reta Replies To Accusations

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

The recent controversy between some members of the Nebraska swimming team and coach John Reta appears to have all the problems of a classic labor-management battle

The swimmers, with the exception of one team member, met with Nebraska Athletic Director Bob Devaney Monday and presented a list of 15 points they said publicize the belief that "all is not peaches and cream," according to a team member.

But those points (or complaints) may not reach Reta because he refuses to meet with seniors chosen to speak for the team.

"The future of the team is not to be determined by seniors because they won't be around next year," Reta said.

The seniors are the spokesmen for the team because, said senior swimmer Scott Ruser, "we're afraid that if the underclassmen speak up there may be reprisals against them scholarship-wise, and we're just insuring against that happening. But 11 of the 12 team members support the team action."

Ruser, who said he is the main spokesman because he was the first one contacted, said that a number of the differences are subjective but that the team believes that "people should know that there are deficiencies in the swimming program at Nebraska.

"Our reasons are based on the fact our record is so poor and we've finished last in the Big Eight the past five years. There is a lack of trust between the team and Coach Reta," Ruser said

One of the 15 points involved in the discussions with Devaney Monday was that "Reta offered full-ride scholarships two years ago to anyone on the team that finished in the top six in the Big Eight. One team member finished sixth in his event that year and didn't get a scholarship as promised," Ruser said.

Reta said the statement is only partially true. "We have through the years tried to give additional scholarship money to those individuals that finish in the top six in the Big Eight or go to the national meet, providing we have the scholarship to give. But that's the only condition, that we have money available "

Other concerns on the list question Reta's coaching techniques, his inability to recruit and keep Nebraska state champions on the team and his having a double standard for swimmers of different abilities.

Ruser said "that one guy comes to practice late and gets chewed out while a top swimmer comes to practice late and not much is said to him.

"Another point was that the better swimmers got more attention than others during practice."

"The good get chewed out along with the not-so-good," said Reta. "It's just that a good swimmer generally is the one that shows up for practice and on time."

Regarding other points on the list, Reta said, "I'm willing to stand on my record. I coached Lincoln Southeast to eight straight state championships and I feel we have improved consistently since I've been coaching here

"This is a complicated situation, but in talking individually with the swimmers who will be returning next year I'm optimistic we can advance the program," Reta said.

"We have some excellent young swimmers who are willing to pay the price it takes to excel, and with the new facility in the Sports Center, we should be able to solve a lot of problems," Reta said.

"I recently showed a prospect from Indiana our old four-lane pool and then showed him the new one," Reta said. "And he said there wouldn't be any way he would come here if the old pool was all there was."

Reta described scheduling problems in the past because a number of teams, including Big Eight members, had said the Coliseum facility was dangerous due to poor lighting and poor markings.

"If we couldn't get opponents to come here, then that meant we had to travel to get meets and that meant budget problems," Reta said. "Also a more attractive home schedule helps recruiting because the better the competition the better the swimmers are in the long run "

Two former state champions were left off of this year's team because, according to Reta, "one was too irregular in attending practice and the other became scholastically ineligible.

"But we're looking to the future and we hope to get as many state champions as we can This year's juniors in high school were the best to come down the pike in a long time and we hope to get as many of the top swimmers as we can," Reta said "You can't go handing out scholarships on potential anymore because the money is so tight But if a kid proves himself, he gets a reward, just like a walk-on in football or any other sport

"I've been criticized through the years by individuals and my office is always open in case anybody has a complaint," said Reta "There is no reason a kid can't come in and talk to me about a personal problem or something else. I just hope this thing gets cleared up soon, because the longer it goes on the more it hurts the program

"Six years ago Kansas State dropped its swimming program because the coach felt he could not compete with the conference and recommended the program either be beefed up or dropped," said Reta "Now there are three pools and a diving well unused because there is no intercollegiate swimming offered at K-State. I don't want to see that happen here."

In another side of the controversy, Devaney said he would not meet with the group of seniors. "There is no point in meeting with them since they won't be around next year," Devaney said Tuesday in a United Press International story The story also said Devaney said he understood that those who complained about Reta concerning his ability to coach and recruit, were "unsuccessful swimmers" who expect too much of the coach.

Members of the team contacted Tuesday evening denied the goal was to have Reta removed.

No. Platte: Little Fishing

One of a Series
By TOM VINT
Outdoor Editor

North Platte — Fishing in this part of the country is in a temporary period of nonactivity. That goes all the way from the fishermen to the fish.

Tom Golden, bait shop operator at North Platte's Lake Maloney said not many fishermen were out, nor had they been. Lindy/Little Joe Tackle Co. fishing pro Gary Roach found out why. The fish weren't out either.

"This lake is almost barren," Roach said after fishing Maloney all day Monday. "These fish just aren't here right now. What I think they do is move up the canal system on either side of this lake."

Lake Maloney is part of the Tri-County Irrigation system and also feeds a power generating station just north of here. The inflow and outflow canals are running full at this time of year, if not of water, then certainly of fish, according to the 12-year fishing guide and pro.

"We fished this lake all day long, ran the graph locator and didn't find a fish," Roach said. "If they would have been in the main lake, we would have at least seen them somewhere.

"We ran water from 25 feet to two feet and nothing. We had two hits all day long and both of those came in the outflow canal area. The only thing I can figure is they have headed into the canals."

Monday was the first day Roach had been skunked on his tour through Nebraska. He had figured the big lakes, such as Harlan County Reservoir and Lake McConaughy (our next stop on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday) would be the most difficult fishing.

"I'm told by the biologists and the people around the lake that Maloney has good fish populations," Roach said. "You couldn't prove it by me but then we couldn't get a boat back into the canal systems either."

Monte Madsen, head of the District IV fisheries department, added another puzzling tidbit to Roach's no-fish dilemma.

"This had been a really strange year for our netting operations, too," Madsen said. The Game and Parks Commission uses Maloney as its walleye brood stock operation. Fishery biologists run nets into the lake during the spawning period to catch spawners, milk out the eggs, then hatch the eggs at the North Platte fish hatchery.

"Last year during the netting we took about 1,500 fish," Madsen said. "This year we only netted about 300. We're going to have to run nets at Lake McConaughy to fill all our hatchery orders for walleye eggs. It's been a real funny year and I can't quite explain what's happened."

Roach had an inkling the weather had a lot to do with the nonactivity of the fish.

"Just since I've been here the past week or so there have been cold fronts moving through almost every day, or so it seems," said the Brainerd, Minn., native. "There is nothing in this world which turns fish off more than the kind of weather patterns we've been having."

Still, Roach feels Maloney could be a very good summer walleye lake.

"If it's got the walleye numbers, and the people around here seem to think it does, then the lake should be real good during the summer," he said. "There are a ton of bait fish in the lake and that's a good sign.

"The lake structure is good for summer walleye, too," he added. "There are some good breaks from 12-18 foot water and a couple of sunken islands which should hold good numbers of fish in the summer. I'd like to be here then instead of now."

Apparently that's what the fish have been thinking, too. They aren't on the breaks now but as Roach said, "You can bet they'll be there in the summer."

Rain Delays NU, NWU Baseball

Rain forced the postponement of two local baseball doubleheaders, a softball game and three American Association baseball games

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln doubleheader at Omaha with UNO has been rescheduled for 2 p.m. Wednesday The twin-bill between Nebraska Wesleyan and Dana at Blair has been re-set for Wednesday or Thursday afternoon, depending on the weather, at 2.30 p m

The Nebraska women's softball game with Tarkio was also postponed. No date was set for a game.

In the American Association, Denver at Tulsa and Evansville at Iowa were postponed due to rain and Indianapolis at Omaha was postponed due to cold weather.

Egan Fired; Nissalke In

HOUSTON (UPI) — Houston Rockets President and General Manager Ray Patterson Tuesday hired his Wisconsin buddy, much-traveled and controversial Tom Nissalke, to replace John Egan and coach the stagnant NBA team.

Patterson seized the chance to dump Egan when his three-year contract expired and grabbed Nissalke, a former charge he has wanted as his coach for many years.

Patterson coached Nissalke in high school at Wayland Academy in Beaver Dam, Wisc., and hired him in 1968 to be assistant coach of the NBA Milwaukee Bucks. The two have remained close even in the years their careers were separated.

"We've been friends for 25 years now," Nissalke said. "We've talked about everything for years. Ray is a guy who does not interfere. Any complaints he has he always talks them out."

Since 1972 Nissalke, 41, has stormed through four pro head coaching jobs. Most were successful and most set off sparks

"We're fortunate to have Tom available at this time" Patterson said Nissalke was working as a Bucks' scout after starting this season with the now-defunct Utah Stars

In a recent interview, Patterson said he would be the toughest boss Nissalke ever worked for

"I've known him 30 years I know every thing about him and he knows a lot about the way I operate For years we have talked on the phone about sensitive matters," he said

Patterson was tough in his appraisal of Nissalke's move from the Milwaukee assistant job to the head coaching job of the ABA Dallas Chaparrals

"For several seasons Tom got caught up with owners and general managers who wanted to coach" said Patterson, who often times this year loudly disagreed with Egan's game strategy.

Alvarez To Leave Lexington

Barry Alvarez
Going To Iowa

Lexington — Barry Alvarez, head football coach at Lexington High School the past two seasons, announced his resignation Tuesday to accept a similar position at Mason City, Iowa.

Finding it difficult to make a decision about leaving after his teams had compiled a 15-4 mark over his short tenure, Alvarez consulted University of Nebraska assistant coach John Melton since his recruiting duties cover that particular area.

"Coach Melton said the area was the best in the state of Iowa," Alvarez said. "He's the one who really helped me. He said I may never have another chance like this again.

"It's quite an emotional decision," added Alvarez, a former linebacker for Nebraska and assistant coach at Lincoln Northeast. "I must have changed my mind three times yesterday alone "

Alvarez says the town of 32,000 has just one public high school and the best physical plant he's ever seen.

"The funny thing was," he added. "I wasn't even looking for a job. The superintendent (former Lincolnite Roger Clough) called me and asked if I was interested and I said no. But eventually, he talked me into visiting the school.

"It's going to take a little rebuilding," Alvarez said. "It's not like when I stepped in here and was at the top already."

A successor to Alvarez is being sought, according to Lexington athletic director Ray Ehlers.

Westphal Peps Suns' Win

Phoenix, Ariz. (UPI) — Paul Westphal and Keith Erickson combined for 70 points to lead the Phoenix Suns to a 130-114 victory and a 3-1 advantage over Seattle Tuesday night in their NBA Western Conference semifinal playoff series.

Westphal scored 39 points, tying his high since joining the Suns at the start of this season. Erickson, a veteran forward, came off the bench to score 31 points.

Alvan Adams had 17, Ricky Sobers 14 and Gar Heard 11 for the Suns, who never trailed in the game, which was tied only once at 6-6.

Fred Brown, who started for the Supersonics in contrast to his usual sixth man role, had 33. Tom Burleson added 26.

The Suns led 60-47 at halftime after shooting 49 per cent from the floor to 45 per cent for Seattle. Brown managed only eight points in 21 minutes of the first half.

Phoenix sprinted to its largest lead of the night, 90-69, in the closing seconds of the third quarter as Westphal had 12 points and Erickson 10 for the period.

Game five of the best-of-seven series will be in Seattle Sunday afternoon.

Met Homers Spark Brawl

By The Associated Press

St. Louis may have won the beanball battle, but the New York Mets—with two-run homers from Felix Millan, Del Unser and John Milner—won the war Tuesday night 8-0.

The homers, all in the first two innings, touched off the battle between Cards starter Lynn McGlothen, 1-2 and the victim of all three homers, and New York left-hander Jon Matlack, 2-0. McGlothen and Cards Manager Red Schoendienst were ejected along with New York infielder Bud Harrelson.

McGlothen first struck Unser with a pitch in the third inning and, in turn, was brushed back by Matlack in the Cards' half of the inning. Plate umpire Bruce Froemming warned Matlack, who drew the automatic $50 fine.

Warriors Smash Pistons In Opener

Oakland (UPI) — Phil Smith scored 15 of his game-high 26 points in a decisive second period and the defending champion Golden State Warriors crushed the Detroit Pistons 127-103 in the opener of their NBA playoff series Tuesday night

The best-of-seven Western Conference semi-final continues here Thursday night The Warriors are 6-0 against Detroit this season.

Detroit bolted to an early 18-12 lead, but the Warriors never trailed after a 12-0 spree gave them a 24-18 bulge with 3:40 to go in the opening period

Guard Charles Dudley came off the bench and scored four of those 12 points and had seven as Golden State showed a 34-31 lead entering the second quarter.

NBA All-Star Smith then took over and helped the Warriors outscore the Pistons 31-20 for a 65-51 lead at margin at the half.

Reserve forward Derrek Dickey also played a key role in the quarter, scoring five points in a 7-0 spree that gave Golden State breathing room

The onslought continued in the second half, with the Warriors doing a fine defensive job and preventing the Pistons from penetrating

Ball-hawking Golden State had a total of 14 steals, guard Charles Johnson leading the way with four.

Rick Barry was off-target on his shooting, contributing only 13 points, but the Warriors' leader compensated with a game-high 14 assists.

Detroit's most serious threat in the second half came on a string of seven straight points that cut the Warriors' lead to 101-88 with 7:48 to go in the game

Charles Johnson then scored four points in an 8-0 binge that made it 109-88 with 5:30 remaining

Center Bob Lanier paced the Pistons with 18 points and also grabbed a game-high 16 rebounds Jamaal Wilkes added 16 points for the winners

Flyers Trounce Maple Leafs, 7-1

From News Wires

Don Saleski scored a hat trick including two goals in a 1:33 span of the second period to lead the Philadelphia Flyers to a 7-1 rout of the Toronto Maple Leafs Tuesday night and a 3-2 advantage in their Stanley Cup quarterfinal playoff series.

The victory enabled the Islanders to bring the series home to Uniondale, N.Y., Thursday for the sixth game of the series.

New York 4, Buffalo 3

New York defenseman Bert Marshall scored his first goal of the season with 19 seconds left in the game to lift the Islanders to a 4-3 victory over the Buffalo Sabres and a 3-2 lead in their best-of-seven series

The victory enabled the Islanders to bring the series home to Uniondale, N.Y., Thursday for the fifth game of the series.

With the contest tied 3-3 on an opposing pair of third-period goals, New York's Ed Westfall won a draw from Don Luce at the right faceoff circle. Andre St. Laurent chased the puck in back of the net and passed to Marshall at the left point. Marshall's shot sailed over the shoulder of Buffalo goalie Gerry Desjardins.

Boston 7, Los Angeles 1

Defenseman Brad Park, who underwent knee surgery less than seven weeks ago, scored two goals and assisted on two others in helping the Boston Bruins to a 7-1 victory over the Los Angeles Kings

Park scored a short-handed goal and later on a power play as the Bruins took a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven quarter-final series The sixth game is scheduled for Los Angeles Thursday night

The Bruins spotted Los Angeles a 1-0 lead on Marcel Dionne's power play goal at 6:39 of the first period before storming back in sultry Boston Garden

Don Marcotte tied the score on a 20-footer at 17:41 Then Boston broke the game wide open with four goals in the second period and two more in the finale

Bobby Schmautz put Boston in front 3-1 with a goal on a perfect pass from Jean Ratelle in the opening minute of the middle period

Exon Names 9 To Law Board

Nine Nebraskans were appointed to the state advisory council for the National Legal Services Corporation, according to an announcement Tuesday from Gov. J. J. Exon's office.

Exon appointed:

Jan Gauger and Bea Richmond, Lincoln; Doris Mendes, Michael Adams, Vlayton Byam and Robert Spire of Omaha; John Gale, North Platte; William Stewart Jr., Lexington; and Clark Nichols, Scottsbluff.

Gale, Spire, Stewart, Nichols and Byam were chosen from a list of attorneys supplied by the state bar association. The rest came from recommendations supplied by the state's legal aid societies.

The federal legal services corporation was created to provide funds for legal assistance in civil matters to persons financially unable to afford private counsel. The state advisory council assists in the effort.

Hua Sees Subversion

Toddler Killed Near Arcadia In Road Mishap

Arcadia (AP) — A rural Arcadia toddler was killed Monday afternoon when he fell from the cab of a road maintainer on a Custer County road near his parents farm about 4½ miles west of here, and was run over by the maintainer.

The victim was identified as Mark Armour, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benny Armour. The child would have been three years old on April 29th.

Investigators said the boy's father was operating the maintainer when the accident occurred.

Parkins To Star

Hollywood (UPI) — Barbara Parkins will star in "Shout at the Devil."

NOTICE OF INTENT TO FILE FOR RELEASE OF FUNDS

This request relates to the four projects: Low Interest Loan Subsidy and Pentzer Park Improvements, both located in the Clinton area, bounded by 27th Street on the west, Holdrege Street on the south, 33rd Street on the east, and Leighton Street on the north; Land Acquisition for West Lincoln Park, located in West Lincoln, bounded by First Street on the east, Cornhusker Highway to the south, I-80 to the west, and Belmont Avenue on the north; and Abandoned Building Removal Program to be located throughout the City of Lincoln.

All applicable environmental reviews and clearance for the above projects have been completed, as required by HUD. On April 29, 1976, a request and certification for funding of the above projects will be filed.

The City of Lincoln, Nebraska, will undertake the project described above with Block Grant funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), under TITLE I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974. City of Lincoln, Nebraska, is certifying to HUD that the City of Lincoln, Nebraska, and Mayor Helen Boosalis in her official capacity as Mayor, consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental reviews, decision making, and action; and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval, City of Lincoln, Nebraska, may use the Block Grant funds, and HUD will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969. HUD will accept an objection to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance on the certification only if it is on one of the following bases: (a) That the certification was not in fact executed by the chief executive officer or other officer of applicant approved by HUD; (b) that applicant's environmental review record for the project indicates omission of a required decision, finding, or step applicable to the project in the environmental review process. Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedure and may be addressed to HUD at the Omaha Area Office, 7100 W. Center Road, Omaha, Nebraska 68106. Objections to the release of funds on bases other than those stated above will not be considered by HUD. No objection received after May 14, 1976, will be considered by HUD.

The applicant is the City of Lincoln, Nebraska; Mayor Helen Boosalis.

Met Homers Spark Brawl

After both dugouts were warned, McGlothen renewed the battle by brushing back Matlack in the fourth and then hitting his pitching rival with a 3-0 delivery

Outfielder Dave Kingman led a charge from the New York bench, but order was quickly restored after Froemming banished McGlothen and Schoendienst

Brandt Has Buying Spree At Oaklawn

Omaha — Louis Brandt went on a buying spree at the recently completed Oaklawn Park race meeting

With more than $160,000 in new purchases complementing an already powerful stable, Brandt has arrived at Ak-Sar-Ben aiming for some of the more than $5,000 000 in purses

Construction of a new grandstand at the Nebraska State Fairgrounds in Lincoln will not be completed until 1977 So Ak-Sar-Ben will host 75 days of racing this year — 60 days starting next Tuesday through July 17 for the regular Ak-Sar-Ben meeting, and 15 days, July 20-August 7 for the Fairgrounds

Brandt s most expensive claim at Oaklawn was Avdee, a three-year-old gelding taken for Douglas County Assessor Frank Bemis for $25,000 Avdee moved in to the allowance ranks and won one race and finished second once to earn $9,100 for Bemis

Bemis also had two other horses win at Oaklawn — Bourre Padnah and Kim s Lad

Brandt spent more than $75,000 for Mr and Mrs William Rice's Dazoc Stable of Cozad The claims included I'd Rather Walk $22 500 Perfect Dear, $20 000, Greg Ness $15,000, and Amazing May $10,000

The Rices also have an outstanding three-year-old filly in Roger s Choice She won her only two starts of 1975 here at Ak-Sar-Ben At Oaklawn, she added two victories in five starts

Habitat Law Protested

By The Associated Press

An effort to repeal the new wildlife habitat preservation law, which is funded through increased hunting and fishing fees, is being mounted by a southeast Nebraska citizens' committee

Secretary of State Allen Beermann a sample petition in preparation for a drive to win repeal through a voter referendum next November

The committee is headed by chairman Robert H Miller and co-chairman Bruce Stockdale, both of Falls City Guy Cooper of Humboldt delivered the sample petition and committee formation data to Beermann Monday

"The attorney general and I reviewed it this morning and sent it (the sample petition) back with three technical corrections," Beermann said

"So it will go back to them to make final additions or corrections so it will be in form for me to approve and then they can begin circulating," he added

Nebraska has a mechanism for repeal of any legislation enacted during a Unicameral session through specific legal steps

After approval of the petitions' form, circulators must gather 22,566 valid signatures of registered voters, which represents 5 per cent of the total vote for governor in the last gubernatorial election

The signatures must also meet the requirement of being 5 per cent of the gubernatorial vote in two-fifths of Nebraska's counties, or 38 of them

If those initiative referendum requirements are met within 90 days of the Unicameral session's end and 30 days before the general election, the issue of whether to repeal the measure will go before the voters

The Nebraska electorate then decides whether to repeal the measure or let the handiwork of the Unicameral stand

The Committee For the Repeal of the Bill 861 seeks to strike down a measure that roughly doubles hunting and fishing fees in the state

Among the increases in that bill is the hike for hunting of upland game birds, creating a "habitat stamp" and boosting the fee from $1 to $7 50

The additional $2 4 million raised by the habitat stamp and other fee hikes would be used by the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission to preserve existing wildlife habitat and encourage farmers to create new habitat areas

Nets, Colonels Set Pace

By The Associated Press

If the Doctor and the Bird keep doing their things, then it'll probably be the New York Nets and the Kentucky Colonels in the American Basketball Association finals

The Doctor, of course, is Julius Erving, the league's first three-time Most Valuable Player He was most valuable for New York on both ends of the court Tuesday night

First he scored 32 points Then he kept San Antonio from scoring two with five seconds to play He blocked a Mike Gale shot and secured the Nets 110-108 victory that gave New York a 3-2 lead over the Spurs in their best-of-seven semifinal series The Nets can move into the finals by winning Wednesday night in San Antonio

The Bird, of course, is Bird Everitt His first name is William, but that's only a technicality The Bird was flying high Tuesday night in Louisville, scoring 40 points in the Colonels 126-114 victory over Denver the ABA s defending champions

It gave Kentucky a 2-1 semifinal lead over the Nuggets, and the Colonels can put the pressure on even more by taking the fourth game Wednesday night at home

"I just hope we can maintain our tough mental attitude," Kentucky Coach Hubie Brown said Denver Coach Larry Brown thinks his Nuggets won t fold up in the critical fourth game "We have some people who respond to challenges," he said "We've just got to come back Wednesday night"

San Antonio has to come back, too, or it'll be eliminated from the playoffs Spurs General Manager John Begzos has been talking up a storm to intensify fan interest—and the talking he's been doing has Nets Coach Kevin Loughery hopping mad Begzos has aimed a few barbs at New York forward Rich Jones,

G&P's Bailey Irked By Group's Action

By The Associated Press

Bill Bailev acting director of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission, said Tuesday an effort to repeal the new habitat stamp law is aimed at scuttling a needed program

'We feel that this is a step in the right direction, it was strongly supported by the commission," Bailey said in support of LB861 the Unicameral passed measure the would increase hunting and fishing fees in Nebraska to upgrade wildlife habitat

"Obviously, it was not a small measure by any means,' Bailey said 'The increases were fairly substantial and we felt that if we were going to do anything at all, it had to be a substantial program "

A citizens' committee from the Falls City area has filed sample petitions with the secretary of state in preparation for a drive to win repeal of LB861 through a voter referendum, an action that Bailey said took him by surprise

"I knew that there was opposition in the Falls City area ' he said, "but I didn't know it was to the entire bill I thought it was to the increase in the non-resident fishing fees

Bailey said he expects continued strong support from commission members and indicated there may be an effort to put the commission on record as opposing the drive He said the matter will be reviewed at next weeks s commission meeting

YCC Camps In Lincoln Area

Two of Nebraska s seven Youth Conservation Corps camps will be operating in the Lincoln area this summer and young people wanting summer employment in the program must apply by May 1

The YCC program offers those in the 15-to 18 year age group a combination of summer jobs and conservation education Examples of work include tree planting nature trail construction maintenance work and construction of recreation facilities

Besides the camps in Lincoln others are being operated in Omaha McCook Chadron Scottsbluff and Valentine

The Youth Conservation Corps is sponsored by the U S Departments of Interior and Agriculture and is coordinated in Nebraska by the Game and Parks Commission Applicatin forms are available from Nebraska Job Service offices high schools affirmative action employment groups and the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission

Blair Ready For CU Wins

Boulder Colo (UPI) Colorado s new basketball coach Bill Blair says he expects to be fired if he can t produce a winning team for the Big Eight school

The University of Colorado is going to put a lot of money into its basketball program and I m not going to stay if they aren t said Blair But nobody is going to waste money on me If I don t win at Colorado I ll be gone

Blair 34 was hired earlier this month to replace Russell Sox Walseth who was fired in March Blair s Virginia Military Institute team last season had a 22 10 record the school s first winning season since 1941

1974 Divorce Rate Highest Since WWII

Washington (UPI) — Nearly 2% of American married women got divorced in 1974, a record for U S divorce rates since World War II, a federal government study reported Tuesday

The National Center for Health Statistics also said couples divorcing in 1974 had about 1,099,000 children under the age of 18 — a third straight year of decline in the average number of children involved in each divorce decree

Although the number of men involved presumably would be the same, the center keeps and reports its divorce rate statistics in terms of the female partner

It said the 1974 rate was 19 3 per 1,000 married women aged 15 or older

The previous postwar peak was 17 9 per 1,000 in 1946, a year of social upheaval in which the strains of wartime separation took a heavy toll on American marriages

In 1967, the year before divorces began escalating rapidly, the center said the rate was 11 2 per 1,000 married women

The new report said the median length of marriages at time of divorce in 1974 was 6 5 years, down from 6 6 years in 1973 and 6 7 in 1972

It said about 31% of the 1974 divorces involved marriages less than four years long

It estimated that 17% of divorced men and 28% of divorced women in 1974 were under the age of 25, and that 41% of the men and 52% of the women were under 30

In an earlier report that dealt with total numbers of divorces, the Census Bureau reported April 1 that divorces exceeded 1 million for the first time in American history in 1975 — the year after the period covered by the center's report on divorce rates

Trucks Recalled

Detroit (AP) — General Motors Corp said Tuesday it is recalling 479 current model Chevrolet and GMC medium-duty trucks to replace possibly defective nuts which could cause a loss of steering control

GM said about 5% of the nuts, attached at the steering gear and power steering cylinder, could contain metal flaws

Exon Names 9 To Law Board

Nine Nebraskans were appointed to the state advisory council for the National Legal Services Corporation, according to an announcement Tuesday from Gov. J. J. Exon's office.

Exon appointed:

Jan Gauger and Bea Richmond, Lincoln, Doris Mendes, Michael Adams, Vlayton Byam and Robert Spire of Omaha; John Gale, North Platte; William Stewart Jr., Lexington; and Clark Nichols, Scottsbluff.

Gale, Spire, Stewart, Nichols and Byam were chosen from a list of attorneys supplied by the state bar association. The rest came from recommendations supplied by the state's legal aid societies.

The federal legal services corporation was created to provide funds for legal assistance in civil matters to persons financially unable to afford private counsel. The state advisory council assists in the effort.

Hua Sees Subversion

Hong Kong (UPI) — China's new Premier Hua Kuo-Feng denounced both the United States and the Soviet Union for "interference, control and subversion" in the Middle East.

HOME BUYERS T.V. SHOW

Channel 9 Wednesday Thursday 6 P.M.

THE LAND an investment for all times

The investment, of course, is a home of your own. When you buy a home, you are not spending your shelter dollars, you are putting them to work.

Because REALTORS® believe that every citizen should be able to enjoy these advantages, we are concerned that you know what to expect when buying your own home because it is the largest investment of your life, when the best time is to buy your home and that you know what the advantages are in going through a REALTOR.

These areas and those of selling a home will be covered in a one hour television program Wednesday, 21 April at 6 p.m. and on Thursday evening, 22 April, at 6 o'clock. The program has been produced locally by the Lincoln Board of REALTORS®, Inc. and promoted with the assistance of Commercial Federal Savings & Loan Association, State Federal Savings and Loan Association, Conservative Investment Company, First City Savings & Loan Association, Home Builders Association of Lincoln, Nebraska Central Building & Loan, Nebraska Title Company, Fidelity National Title Insurance Company and Lincoln Federal Savings & Loan Association.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Wednesday, April 21, 1976

John Barrymore, an Aquarian, was an astrology buff — one of the world's greatest actors and interpreters of Shakespeare. His biographer, Gene Fowler, once told me, "John Barrymore would be jealous of me, talking to you. He was a real student of astrology." Incidentally, tumultuous author Fowler was born under Pisces.

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Put check on any tendency to be extravagant. Stay within confines of budget. Temptation will be to kick over the traces. Overcome it. Friend who smiles a great deal may be hurting on the inside. Be aware, sensitive and understanding.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get "break" at last minute. What seemed a lost cause is revitalized. Gemini, Virgo could be in scenario. Accent is on getting reliable information — and persons. Partner or mate is restless and desires change. Be aware and consider various options.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on luxury items, family relationships, special correspondence. You've been searching for key to unlock an annoying dilemma. You find it. One close to you cooperates — if your approach is diplomatic. Act accordingly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You require additional information — and backing. Know it; avoid premature actions. Check tax structure, leases, rights and permissions. Pisces, Virgo persons could figure prominently. You gain greater insight into motives of one who is physically attractive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Assume greater responsibility for actions. Public response, reaction, opinion has more impact now than in recent past. Know it and prepare — be knowledgable about public relations. Emphasis on co-operation, joint efforts, contracts, marriage.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Finish what you start; obtain valid hint from Leo message. Keep health resolutions, dental appointments. Basic information is important. Eschew apparent shortcuts. Cycle is such that you gain most through soft sell, not via forceful procedures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stress new starts, creative projects — deal with Aquarius, Leo persons. Special relationship encounters some obstacles. Be mature — be independent without being arrogant. You will discover depth of love.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You do best now by considering potential, being aware of security. You learn lessons. Key is to apply them. Refuse to be intimidated by one who cites experience. Be sure you get credit that is due. You'll earn respect by standing tall.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Sense of humor is main ally. That is followed by flexible approach. Refuse to be pinned down or shoved into emotional corner. Experiment. Ask questions. Spotlight publications, communications. Travel is on agenda.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Count your change. Protect your own interests. Obtain hint from Scorpio message. What you want is available but the price might be inflated. State case in forthright manner. In that way, you will be helped, not hindered.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar cycle is high — you overcome obstacles by being persistent. Gemini, Virgo and Libra figure prominently. Emphasis on position, prestige, dealings with professional superiors. Now you can make reasonable requests, even demands, and have them fulfilled. Know it and act as if you are confident about it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make waves, moves. Refuse to be backed into corner of status quo. Gemini, Virgo and Aquarius individuals could be part of picture. Member of opposite sex plays prominent role. If you dare love, you will be loved in return.

IF APRIL 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you enjoy food, socializing, travel. You have fine sense of humor and an inquisitive mind. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. May should be your most significant month of 1976. You come into your own this year. What was started two years ago will now bear fruit. Congretulations!

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R

is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Wednesday, April 21, 1976

John Barrymore, an Aquarian, was an astrology buff — one of the world's greatest actors and interpreters of Shakespeare. His biographer, Gene Fowler, once told me, "John Barrymore would be jealous of me talking to you." He was a real student of astrology. Incidentally, tumultuous author Fowler was born under Pisces.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Put check on any tendency to be extravagant. Stay within confines of budget. Temptation will be to kick over the traces. Overcome it. Friend who smiles a great deal may be hurting on the inside. Be aware, sensitive and understanding.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get "break" at last minute. What seemed a lost cause is revitalized. Gemini, Virgo could be in scenario. Accent is on getting reliable information — and persons. Partner or mate is restless and desires change. Be aware and consider various options.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on luxury items, family relationships, special correspondence. You've been searching for key to unlock an annoying dilemma. You find it. One close to you cooperates — if your approach is diplomatic. Act accordingly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You require additional information — and backing. Know it, avoid premature actions. Check tax structure, leases, rights and permissions. Pisces, Virgo persons could figure prominently. You gain greater insight into motives of one who is physically attractive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Assume greater responsibility for actions. Public response, reaction, opinion has more impact now than in recent past. Know it and prepare — be knowledgable about public relations. Emphasis on cooperation, joint efforts, contracts, marriage.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Finish what you start, obtain valid hint from Leo message. Keep health resolutions, dental appointments. Basic information is important. Eschew apparent shortcuts. Cycle is such that you gain most through soft sell, not via forceful procedures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stress new starts, creative projects — deal with Aquarius, Leo persons. Special relationship encounters some obstacles. Be mature — be independent without being arrogant. You will discover depth of love.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You do best now by considering potential, being aware of security. You learn lessons. Key is to apply them. Refuse to be intimidated by one who cites experience. Be sure you get credit that is due. You'll earn respect by standing tall.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Sense of humor is main ally. That is followed by flexible approach. Refuse to be pinned down or shoved into emotional corner. Experiment. Ask questions. Spotlight publications, communications. Travel is on agenda.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Count your change. Protect your own interests. Obtain hint from Scorpio message. What you want is available but the price might be inflated. State case in forthright manner. In that way, you will be helped, not hindered.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar cycle is high — you overcome obstacles by being persistent. Gemini, Virgo and Libra figure prominently. Emphasis on position, prestige, dealings with professional superiors. Now you can make reasonable requests, even demands, and have them fulfilled. Know it and act as if you are confident about it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make waves, moves. Refuse to be backed into corner of status quo. Gemini, Virgo and Aquarius individuals could be part of picture. Member of opposite sex plays prominent role. If you dare love, you will be loved in return.

IF APRIL 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you enjoy food, socializing, travel. You have fine sense of humor and an inquisitive mind. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. May should be your most significant month of 1976. You come into your own this year. What was started two years ago will now bear fruit. Congratulations!

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
